

THE UNIVERSITY OF NOTTINGHAM SCHOOL OF ECONOMICS

- Job Title: Associate Professor in Economics
- Salary: Salary will be within the range £46,278 - £55,259 per annum. Salary can progress to £65,965 per annum, subject to performance
- Location: School of Economics
- Responsible to: Head of School of Economics

Job Outline:

The successful candidate will contribute to the School's reputation as a recognised centre of international excellence. Applicants with research and teaching interests in behavioural/experimental economics or trade theory are particularly encouraged to apply. However, applications are welcomed from candidates with interests across all areas of the discipline, including development economics, international economics or microeconomics. They will be expected to deliver high quality teaching programmes at both undergraduate and postgraduate level, and assist with the administration of the School.

Main Duties and Responsibilities:

- To establish and develop a programme of research within the School which complements and adds to the School's internationally recognised research activities.
- To support the School's research income generation plans by seeking external funding for the post holder's programme of research.
- To publish the results of the research programme in high quality international journals.
- To disseminate the results of the research programme through a variety of publication outlets and through national and international workshops, conferences and seminars.
- To develop teaching materials for lectures, tutorials and classes for the School's undergraduate and postgraduate programmes.
- To give lectures, tutorials and classes on the School's undergraduate and postgraduate programmes.
- To supervise Masters and PhD students preparing dissertations.
- To participate fully in the School's examination process through the preparation and marking of examinations and coursework and through participation in examination boards.
- To act as a personal tutor for undergraduate and postgraduate students and support their courses of study.
- To assist in the administration and leadership of the School's teaching and research activities through taking on specific administrative duties, membership of School Committees and participation in School meetings.
- To undertake other duties as required by the Head of School, appropriate to the post.

This job description may be subject to revision following discussion with the person appointed and forms part of the contract of employment.

Person Specification:

	Essential	Desirable
Qualifications/ Education	PhD in Economics or Econometrics.	Postgraduate Certificate in Higher Education
Skills/Training	Excellent communication and presentational skills.	Some training for teaching at University level and experience of teaching and curriculum development at undergraduate and graduate levels.

Experience	International reputation in research area, with significant number of publications in high quality outlets and substantial involvement in outreach activities. Substantial teaching and supervision experience at University level. Some experience of research income generation and of management of research.	Experience of research leadership and administrative management within an academic environment.
Personal Attributes	Well organised. Willingness to work in teams. Willingness and ability to interact with students and support their academic and pastoral development.	Experience of working in research and/or teaching teams. Experience of academic and/or pastoral support for students.

Informal enquiries may be addressed to Professor Alan Duncan, Head of School, tel: +44 (0) 115 951 5620 (School Secretary).

Please quote ref. SM/33512L.

Closing date: 29th January 2010