David H. Guston is Professor of Politics and Global Studies and Co-Director of the Consortium for Science, Policy and Outcomes at Arizona State University. He is also the Principal Investigator and Director of the Center for Nanotechnology in Society at ASU, as well as director of its associated Virtual Institute for Responsible Innovation (VIRI). CNS-ASU, funded by the National Science Foundation for roughly $13 million over ten years (2005-2015), studies the societal aspects of nano-scale science and engineering and pursues a vision of the anticipatory governance of emerging technologies. Professor Guston’s book, Between Politics and Science (Cambridge U. Press, 2000) was awarded the 2002 Don K. Price Prize by the American Political Science Association for best book in science and technology policy, and his papers are among the most well-cited in the field. He has held visiting positions at Columbia University, the Copenhagen Business School, the Kent School of Law, and Durham University (UK). In 2002, he was elected a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. In 2008, he served as co-chair of the Gordon Research Conference on Science and Technology Policy, “Governing Emerging Technologies.” In 2013, he became the founding editor-in-chief of the Journal of Responsible Innovation. He holds an A.B. from Yale College and a PhD in political science from MIT.
