Where could classics take you?

I am delighted that you are considering studying the classical world at University of Nottingham. I hope this guide will help you make the right choice about which course to study at university.

The classical world is both alien and familiar: alien because the societies of Greece and Rome existed 2,000 years ago, with very different values and structures from our own society; familiar because the two related cultures have exercised a crucial formative influence on modern civilisation, and provided foundations for Western society.

The fascination of classics lies in our ongoing attempt to access and understand this different world through surviving works of Greek and Roman writers, monuments, art and archaeological evidence.

The Department of Classics at Nottingham has an excellent reputation for both teaching and research. We have a large and diverse body of academic staff, and combine expertise in established fields of classics such as Greek drama, Roman politics or ancient art, with newer areas, such as the modern reception of classical antiquity.

In this guide, we have tried to answer questions you might have on what and how we teach, what we look for in an applicant and what it is like to be a student here. We have also included some information on the career opportunities that are open to you when you have completed your course.

We hope to welcome you to Nottingham soon.

Helen Lovatt
Head of the Department of Classics

Whatever your ambitions, our aim is to help you achieve them here.

Studying classics at Nottingham

We are one of the most popular classics departments in the UK with over 100 new students joining us each year. Our teaching covers Greek and Latin language and literature, Greek and Roman history and art, and the reception of the ancient world.

We work hard to support you in developing your initiative and independence, and encouraging your passion for the study of ancient Greece and Rome. We welcome both students who are new to the study of classical antiquity and those with prior knowledge.

Discover your interests

Our innovative teaching embraces a range of material from Homer to Late Antiquity and from Sparta and the Peloponnese to the Roman Near East. Our degrees are designed for flexibility and coherence. After core introductory modules in year one, you gradually specialise in your own areas of interest.

Facilities and resources

Facilities and resources of particular interest to classics students include the Digital Humanities Centre and the Hallward Library. The Digital Humanities Centre, located within the Humanities Building, offers you a range of specialist, cutting-edge digital equipment, as well as opportunities to volunteer in the University’s research projects. The Hallward Library gives access to all the books and journals you are likely to need for your studies.

At a glance

- Study all aspects of ancient Greece and Rome, whether you have studied classics before or are new to the subject
- Learn in a department that achieved 95% for overall student satisfaction in the 2016 National Student Survey
- Have the freedom to study any element of classics through a dissertation, in a department that is ranked 4th in the UK for research power*

Beyond the curriculum

The department organises an exchange programme taking students to Berlin to work on ancient visual culture. We also take classics into local primary schools through Nottingham Classics Out and About (NoCOOut), which is a great opportunity for volunteering. Our student-led society, Classoc, has regular events including subsidised annual trips to classical sites such as Rome or Pompeii.

Why study with us?

In the Digital Humanities Centre you can enhance coursework, projects and research using the latest graphics and photography equipment, slides, scanners and software.

Modular degrees
All the department’s degree programmes are modular, which means you undertake modules of study with assessment at the end of each semester. Under the modular system, you will normally be required to take modules totalling 60 credits in each semester.

To graduate with a BA degree from University of Nottingham you must take 360 credits of modules – 120 in each year of study. Our modules are worth 10, 20 or 40 credits – the higher the number of credits, the greater the amount of work on the module. Year one is a qualifying year, which means your degree classification will be determined by the work completed in years two and three.

Single honours degrees
In your three years at Nottingham you will take a combination of core and optional modules. These are mainly offered by the Department of Classics but you also have a choice of subsidiary modules from other departments, particularly in years one and two. For example, you might wish to continue studying a language learned at school or college, or begin an entirely new language. A full list of subsidiary modules will be available at registration each year.

Joint honours degree
A joint honours degree is split evenly between your two subjects. The classics half of your degree is normally made up of 60 credits each year (although some joint honours courses allow slightly different splits in year three to accommodate your module choices). Each year your course will consist of core and optional modules in both degree subjects.

Please note that this guide contains information on classics and the classics contribution to your joint honours course. If you are considering applying for a joint honours course, you should also look for information from the other school or department involved in our online prospectus which you can find at nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy

Dissertation
In year three, single honours students will normally complete a dissertation on a subject that particularly interests them. Some students carry out further work on a topic introduced in a module they’ve studied previously; others plan a new topic with the help of a lecturer. The dissertation option is particularly good if you plan to undertake postgraduate study, as it will give you experience of the self-motivation and discipline required to carry out a relatively large project. If there is something you’ve always wanted to write about, it might end up being your dissertation topic.

Over one-third of our UK students receive our means-tested core bursary, worth up to £2,000 a year. For details, see nottingham.ac.uk/financialsupport

English language requirements
IELTS 7.0 (no less than 6.0 in any element). For more information and a list of the alternative English language requirements we accept, please see nottingham.ac.uk/go/alternativerquirements

Developing your academic English and study skills
The Centre for English Language Education (CELE) offers you the opportunity to develop your English language skills at one of the world’s top universities. Accredited by the British Council for the teaching of English, CELE provides high-quality teaching, facilities and support.

Our presessional courses take your English language and academic skills to the level you need to progress to undergraduate study without taking IELTS again. Find out more at nottingham.ac.uk/cele

BA Classics

This course offers the opportunity to study both Greek and Latin language to an advanced level.

As well as reading some of the greatest achievements in Western literature, from Homer to Lucian, Horace to Apuleius, and engaging with these texts in the complexity and richness of their original form, you will use your language skills to think about the ancient world, its culture and history. We welcome applications from students who enjoy learning languages but have not yet had the chance to study either ancient Greek or Latin, as well as those who have prior knowledge.

Year one
In year one you will begin a programme of linguistic study appropriate to your background, designed to allow you to engage on all levels with texts in the original Greek or Latin language. Two core survey modules give you an integrated introduction to the history and culture of Greece and Rome and their reception. The rest of your course is chosen from a range of modules going into more depth in the areas of history, literature or art.

Year two
In year two you will study both ancient Greek and Latin at the appropriate level. You also choose from a wide range of optional modules on the literature, art, history and society of the ancient world.

Year three
You would normally expect to continue with both languages into year three. If you already have an A level in either language, you can continue with advanced study of just one. All students have the option to take a dissertation or a Special Subject with a choice of further optional modules completing the year.

Modules may change, for example due to curriculum developments. The above list is a sample of typical modules that we offer, not a definitive list. The most up to date information can be found on our website at nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy.

Nottingham seemed like the perfect university for me – as well as offering a course that would allow me to study both the ancient and contemporary worlds, there was an amazing range of societies and extracurricular activities on offer.

Iona Hampson, BA Ancient History and History
BA Latin

This course combines learning Latin to a high level of proficiency with the wider study of a range of aspects of classical history, society and culture. It is particularly suited to you if you wish to specialise in Latin and do not wish to learn Greek.

You will study Latin language and literature in all three years. Those with A level Latin start with advanced language and literature modules; those without take language modules at an appropriate level.

Year one
You begin a programme of intensive language study from the most appropriate level (beginners' to advanced), designed to allow you to engage fully with texts in the original Latin. You will also study two core survey modules which give you an integrated introduction to the history and culture of Greece and Rome and their reception.

Alongside this, you can choose three further modules going into more depth on themes, topics and approaches in the areas of history, literature and art.

Year two
You will continue with Latin modules at the appropriate level. All students planning a third-year dissertation require to take Extended Source Study, where you choose from a range of ancient sources for detailed investigation through seminars, a verbal presentation and a 5,000-word essay. You also choose from a wide range of optional modules on the literature, art, history and culture of the ancient world, including the innovative Independent Second-Year Project.

Year three
As well as continuing Latin at an advanced level, you can pursue your interests in a 10,000-word dissertation and choose from further optional modules, including the Special Subject modules which are taught in seminars across the whole year.

"Studying classics at Nottingham offered great variety in the range of modules available and plenty of opportunities to pursue my own interests within the subject, especially with the Independent Second-Year Project and dissertation. It was this that helped me decide to stay on and study for a Masters after my degree – something I never considered before starting full-time study.

BA Ancient History

This course examines the political, social, economic and cultural history of ancient Greece and Rome.

It does not merely handle facts and events, but also explores what lies behind them and what makes them significant and exciting: progress and decline, labour and leisure, revolution and reconciliation, conquest, exploitation and resistance.

No previous knowledge is required and, except in designated language modules, all texts are read in translation. The study of either Greek or Latin is optional.

Year one
You will study two core survey modules which give you an integrated introduction to the history and culture of Greece and Rome and their reception, along with three modules going into more depth on methods, sources and approaches in the areas of history, literature and art – each building up skills in different types of assessment. You are also encouraged to study either ancient Greek or Latin.

Year two
Year two combines a wide range of optional modules exploring ancient history and society with extended studies of an ancient source and an aspect of recent scholarship, to prepare you for third-year dissertation work. Our Independent Second-Year Project module encourages an innovative (often creative) project on your choice of subject. You also have the option to continue or start learning Greek or Latin.

Year three
You will develop and pursue your own interests through a 10,000-word dissertation on any area of ancient history and combine this with a Special Subject module which involves in-depth study of a particular topic, taught in seminars. Optional modules or continued language work complete the year.

BA Classical Civilisation

This course examines the culture and society of classical Greece and Rome.

You will be able to study political and social structures, literature, art and visual culture, thought, religion and social life.

No prior knowledge of Greek, Latin or classical civilisation is required and, except in designated language modules, all texts are read in translation. The study of Greek and Latin is optional.

Year one

You will study two core survey modules which give you an integrated introduction to the history and culture of Greece and Rome and their reception. Alongside these are three modules which go into more depth on themes, topics and approaches in the areas of history, literature and art, each building up skills in different types of assessment.

You are warmly encouraged to begin or continue Greek or Latin, or you can choose modules from another department.

Year two

Year two combines a wide range of optional modules exploring ancient literature, art and history. Students intending to do a third-year dissertation have to write an extended analysis of an ancient source (chosen from a range of options). The Independent Second-Year Project module encourages an innovative (often creative) project on a subject of your own choice. You also have the option to continue or start learning Greek or Latin.

Year three

You will develop and pursue your own interests through a 10,000-word dissertation on any area of classical civilisation and combine this with a Special Subject module which involves detailed, in-depth study of a particular topic, taught in seminars. Optional modules or continued language work complete the year.

I have always found history fascinating and am intrigued by classical life so I thought that this degree would provide me with an amazing opportunity to explore areas of the classical past that I hadn’t been taught about in school.

Joint honours

BA Ancient History and Archaeology
This course emphasises both the common ground between ancient history and archaeology and the different approaches of the two disciplines.

It is suited to those who wish to approach an understanding of the ancient world through material, literary and documentary evidence. Study of Greek or Latin is not required, but may be undertaken as part of the course. You will gain at least 10 days’ excavation or other relevant professional experience in the UK or overseas.

For more information about the archaeology element of your course, including the funding of field work see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/archaeology

BA Archaeology and Classical Civilisation
This course offers the opportunity to combine a broad engagement with classical culture and society with invaluable archaeological skills and techniques for first-hand study of ancient material culture.

Study of Greek or Latin is not required but may be undertaken as part of the course. You will gain at least 10 days’ excavation or other relevant professional experience in the UK or overseas.

For more information about the archaeology element of your course, including the funding of field work see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/archaeology

BA Ancient History and History
Combining modules in history and ancient history, this joint honours course enables you to take a wider view of society’s development.

You will look at the ancient, medieval and modern worlds, learn to think critically about them and discover the challenges and rewards of studying different historical periods.

For more information about the history element of your course see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/history

BA Classical Civilisation and Philosophy
This course combines the study of the classical world with a rigorous training in analytical philosophy.

You will have the opportunity to study thought, literature, history, visual culture and religion, as well as some key thinkers, ideas and movements that have shaped philosophical thinking. The study of Greek or Latin is not required, but may be undertaken as part of the course.

For more information about the philosophy element of your course see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/philosophy

BA Classics and English
This course combines the study of the literature, society, art and culture of classical Greece and Rome with the opportunity to study English language, literature and drama from Old English to the present day.

Study of Greek or Latin is not required but may be taken as part of the course. It is possible to study one of these languages, at advanced or beginners’ level.

For more information about the English element of your course see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/english

I adore my course. It’s a lot to take in for a year one student but lecturers are extremely friendly, and the Classics Society means that you’re able to make friends with people in the upper years and ask them for advice.

Laura Frosdick, BA Classical Civilisation

Engaging study, incredible results

Teaching is mainly carried out through lectures and small-group seminars. All lecturers also have weekly office hours where you can talk about your work one-on-one.

Your week
Your typical week's work may feel strange after school or college, since there is a greater emphasis on learning to work independently. In year one, classics students can expect to attend 12–14 hours of lectures or classes each week. For the rest of the time you will be preparing independently for seminars, completing coursework and – most importantly – exploring for yourself ideas which have come up in class and which you want to read more about.

How will I study?

Teaching and learning
In the Department of Classics, we offer a range of teaching methods designed to help you realise your potential, acquire a rich knowledge and understanding of classical antiquity, and develop transferable skills.

As well as lectures and language classes (for those studying ancient Greek and/or Latin), almost all our modules include seminars where you learn to collaborate and debate. In addition, many of our modules are designed to help you develop your presentation skills, as well as to promote independent research.

How will I be assessed?
We think it’s important to measure your progress using a range of methods. They include examinations, coursework essays, verbal presentations and sometimes reflective statements on your own learning. Where a module fills two semesters, your progress will be measured throughout the year.

Your final degree classification
Your year two and three results respectively count for 33% and 67% of your final, overall grade. Year one is a qualifying year, which means you must pass this year to progress to year two, but your mark will not contribute to your degree classification.

Our Independent Second-Year Project module offers you the freedom to study any element of classics, from the use of myths in computer games to recreating an ancient mosaic.

How to apply

All applications for an undergraduate place to study at University of Nottingham, including applications by international students, must be made through UCAS.

Applications should be made online at ucas.com and candidates will be notified of decisions through UCAS Track.

Your personal statement
This is the section of your UCAS form that tells us most about you, and you should make the best use of it. Be as specific and detailed as you can – we would like to see that you are a student who can work hard, be self-motivated and make the best possible use of the opportunities that our courses offer you. We would also like to hear about any skills you have gained through extracurricular activities.

Alternative qualifications
In this guide you will find our A level entry requirements but we accept a much broader range of qualifications. These include:
- Access to HE Diploma
- Advanced Diploma
- BTech HND/HNC
- BTech Extended Diploma
- Cambridge Pre-U
- International Baccalaureate
- Irish Leaving Certificate
- Scottish Advanced Highers
- Welsh Baccalaureate Advanced Diploma

This list is not exhaustive; we will consider applicants with other qualifications on an individual basis. Please contact us to discuss the suitability of your qualification.

Flexible admissions policy
We recognise that some educational and personal circumstances affect achievement. If we judge that you have experienced circumstances that have adversely affected your achievement, we will consider them when assessing your academic potential. Some courses may vary the offer as a result. For the most up to date information about our offers, please see the entry requirements section of our course pages on our online prospectus. For more information about this policy, please see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/applying

Mature applicants
We encourage applications from mature applicants who have a significant gap in education. You should apply in the normal way through UCAS. More information for mature students can be found at nottingham.ac.uk/mature

International applicants
The University provides a range of information and advice for international applicants. If you are unable to attend an open day, we can meet you in your country at one of our overseas events or arrange an individual visit to the University. For further information please visit nottingham.ac.uk/go/international-applicants

Deferred entry
Applicants who wish to defer their entry by a year will not be at a disadvantage. Please tell us something about your plans for your gap year in your UCAS personal statement.

Equal opportunities policy
The University aims to create the conditions whereby students and staff are treated solely on the basis of their merits, abilities and potential, regardless of gender, race, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, age, socio-economic background, disability, religious or political beliefs, trade union membership, family circumstances, sexual orientation or other irrelevant distinction.

World class for employability

A degree in a classical subject from University of Nottingham will prepare you for a very wide range of employment opportunities.

Succeeding in our course will show employers that you are intelligent, hardworking and flexible, that you analyse written sources critically, that you present your ideas artfully, and that you have the discipline and motivation to plan a project and research it independently.

We have designed two second-year modules to promote our students’ employability. The Independent Second-Year Project is partly assessed on project planning and documentation, and requires you to communicate the classical world to a non-academic audience which you choose and research. The Humanities Placement module starts with a series of workshops on skills development, followed by a professional placement in local organisations, undertaken one day per week over eight weeks.

Careers and Employability Service

Our Careers and Employability Service has a team dedicated to students within the Faculty of Arts. They will be on hand to offer you specialist support and guidance throughout your degree and for life after you graduate.

Whether you need help writing a CV, preparing for an interview or exploring career ideas, you can book one-to-one appointments or come along to a workshop.

Each term there is also an exciting events schedule, bringing you face-to-face with employers offering real-life insight into their professions. For more information see nottingham.ac.uk/careers
