At a glance
- Study in a department ranked in the top 15 in the country by The Complete University Guide 2018
- Have the opportunity to study abroad and gain a new perspective on philosophy in countries around the globe
- Get hands-on experience teaching philosophy as a volunteer in primary schools with the Philosophy Society

Out tutors arranged a visit to the Galleries of Justice in the first week of year one. It was not only interesting but also a great opportunity to meet members of the department and others taking the course.

Ellie Townsend-Brown, BA Philosophy

Beyond the curriculum
Alongside the Philosophy Society, we offer a range of activities to help broaden your skills, make you feel at home in the department or just have some fun! These include: volunteering to teach philosophy in local primary schools, a peer mentoring scheme, and guest lectures.

We encourage you to study abroad for part of your degree - opportunities range from summer schools to a full semester abroad. Find out more at nottingham.ac.uk/studywithus/studysabroad

BA Philosophy

On this course you will gain important skills in clear thinking, argument and communication and knowledge of the main areas of philosophical thought.

You will take a combination of compulsory and optional modules from the Department of Philosophy, as well as a choice of modules from other complementary subjects in years one and two. You also have the opportunity to study abroad for one or two semesters of the course.

Year one
Year one introduces you to the subject through a series of core modules in central philosophical problems. You will also be able to choose optional modules which guide you through principles of good reasoning, argumentation, and writing.

Year two
You will choose from a variety of optional modules, which will build on material studied in year one, allowing you to develop and broaden your philosophical skills and knowledge.

Year three
There will be free choice from a wide variety of more advanced modules, including the opportunity to write a dissertation on a topic of your own choosing.

I decided that I wanted to study philosophy after developing an interest in the kinds of questions that concern philosophers throughout my time at school, and then taking it up as a subject at A level. I love it here, the department is amazingly supportive, the course is varied and extremely interesting, and the campus provides a beautiful place to study. I hope that you will love it as much as I do!

Modules may change, for example due to curriculum developments. The above list is a sample of typical modules that we offer, not a definitive list. The most up to date information can be found on our website at nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy
BA English and Philosophy

This course combines a rigorous training in analytic philosophy with the opportunity to study English language, literature and drama from Old English to the present day. You will develop important skills in clear thinking, argument, the use of language and independent study.

Year one
In English, you have a choice of three core modules from the areas of English Language, English Literature since 1500, Medieval Studies, and Drama and Performance. In philosophy, you will be introduced to the subject through a series of core modules in central philosophical problems and you will also be able to choose optional modules.

Year two
In English, you will choose core modules to develop your studies in at least two areas of the discipline. This will develop your ability to explore the interaction between historical “epochs” and the literature, drama or language you’re studying.
In philosophy, you will choose from a variety of optional modules, which will build on material studied in year one, allowing you to develop and broaden your philosophical skills and knowledge.

Year three
In English, you’ll choose from a range of modules enabling you to specialise in key areas. Philosophy modules in year three reflect the research expertise of our department, including in metaphysics, ethics, logic, philosophy of science, and criminal law. You may also opt to write a dissertation on a subject of your choosing in either department.
For more information on the English element of your course see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/english
For typical philosophy modules see page 9.

BA Religion, Philosophy and Ethics

Our joint honours degree in religion, philosophy and ethics offers one of the broadest humanities courses, which is of the utmost relevance to the contemporary world.
The political and social importance of religion in today’s society cannot be overestimated. The world faces profound questions of human identity and ethics, which the philosophical and theological traditions tackle in many different ways.

Year one
Core modules in year one will introduce you to a wide range of issues in philosophy, religion and ethics from a variety of philosophical and theological perspectives. You may choose to focus on either philosophy or theology and religious studies through a choice of optional modules or combine the two.

Year two
Core modules are offered in philosophy of religion and ethics, including Explaining Religion, where you will study modern conceptions of religion. Optional modules are chosen from those on offer in the Department of Philosophy and the Department of Theology and Religious Studies, allowing you to further develop your interests from year one, or study something new.

Year three
In year three you will have the flexibility to focus on either philosophy or theology and religious studies, with a wide range of modules on offer in both departments. Alternatively, you may choose to give equal weighting to both. You will have the option of writing a dissertation, which will allow you to develop your interest in a particular subject through independent research.
For more information on the theology element of your course see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/theology
For typical philosophy modules see page 9.

My degree has taught me endless transferable skills including how to be concise, how to argue and explain effectively, and how to engage in a debate, all of which have definitely equipped me for life after university. I’ve had the opportunity to deliberate questions that are at the heart of humanity and it is so refreshing to be surrounded by likeminded people, who have a passion for questioning pretty much every aspect of life.
Sian-Kathryn Green, BA Philosophy
BA Classical Civilisation and Philosophy
This course offers a diverse and flexible approach to philosophy, and to the literature, history, and culture of ancient Greece and Rome.
You will enjoy a wide range of modules, delivered by our world-renowned academic staff, with considerable flexibility throughout the degree to tailor your studies to suit your personal interests and aspirations. Studying Greek or Latin isn’t required, but may be undertaken as part of the course.
You will have many opportunities to put your learning into practical use, through schemes such as our volunteering programme in local schools. You will also have access to our outstanding Manuscripts and Special Collections Archive, which houses a rare collection of primary sources to enhance your understanding.
For more information on the classical civilisation element of your course see nottingham.ac.uk/classics
For typical philosophy modules see page 9.

BA Economics and Philosophy
On this course you will divide your time equally between the two subjects. You will study the central aspects of each discipline in years one and two, and in year three will select modules from a variety of specialist subjects offered by the two departments.
Taught jointly by the School of Economics and the Department of Philosophy, this course is designed to equip you with a unique blend of knowledge. Both economics and philosophy look at the fundamental aspects of human society with this combination allowing for a deeper understanding of how societies work.
For more information on the economics element of your course see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/economics
For typical philosophy modules see page 9.

BA Philosophy and Theology
This course combines a rigorous training in analytic philosophy with study of some of the main areas of theological thought.
You will gain a good grounding in the sources and contemporary context for theological reflection by studying the biblical writings, key thinkers, ideas, events and movements that shaped the course of Western Christian thought, alongside other religious traditions. You will also develop an understanding of the central ideas and movements in analytic philosophy, while acquiring important skills in clear thinking, argument and communication.
For more information on the theology element of your course see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/theology
For typical philosophy modules, see page 9.

BA Philosophy, Politics and Economics
This degree offers a holistic approach to the understanding of the world around us.
You will apply the complementary analytical frameworks of philosophy, political science and economics to gain a rich understanding of the roots of, and solutions to, real world problems. It is probably no coincidence that many world leaders have studied philosophy, politics and economics.
You will spend one-third of your time studying modules in each discipline. The modules offered are tailored to the interdisciplinary nature of the course, binding the three elements into a coherent and rigorous programme of study.
For more information on the politics and economics element of your course see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/politics and nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/economics
For typical philosophy modules, see page 9.

I love what you can discover with this subject – it covers almost everything. Nottingham has opened up courses that I didn’t even know existed. I think they got the balance right between the classics and the new, current, happening philosophy that keeps the subject alive.
Tom Ivens, BA Philosophy

The department is a great learning atmosphere full of friendly professionals. The eclectic research of the tutors can bring you into contact with literature, history, archaeology, art history and continental philosophy – something for all students of the programme.
Jack Murphy, BA Philosophy and Theology
For more detailed course content visit nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/philosophy

BA Music and Philosophy
This course provides the opportunity to study the theory and practice of music and acquire a grounding in philosophy. It is equally weighted between the two subjects. The music element of the course covers a wide range of musical repertory, including all periods of Western art music, jazz, world music, popular music and film music, and offers a variety of practical and theoretical approaches. Alongside practice-based modules (including performance, composition, music technology and music analysis), there are modules focusing on specific periods or genres, and on a variety of contextual and contemporary music-related topics.

In philosophy, you will be introduced to the subject through a series of core modules in central philosophical problems. A wide range of core and optional modules, delivered by our world-renowned academic staff, offer considerable flexibility throughout the degree to tailor your studies to your personal interests and aspirations.

Studying philosophy here is great. There’s so much freedom to choose particular areas that you are interested in to study in depth. The lecturers are extremely approachable and break even the most difficult concepts down with ease.

Michaela Lawson, BA Philosophy

Studying music and philosophy at Nottingham opened up opportunities for learning which I never expected. The enthusiasm and friendliness of every topic, the openness and the opportunity to study in Hong Kong for a semester were all exceptionally unique.

Our courses
Engaging study, incredible results

In the Department of Philosophy, we are passionate about innovative and inspiring teaching. We combine traditional and new methods of teaching and learning, to stimulate your passion for philosophy.

How will I study?

Your week
Your typical week’s work will feel strange at first after school or college since there are fewer timetabled teaching hours. In each week of year one you can expect to attend about 12–14 hours of lectures and seminars. For the rest of the time you will be working independently, doing the necessary reading in preparation for seminars, writing essays or working on seminar presentations.

Teaching and learning
Our courses are delivered through lectures, seminars, tutorials and one-to-one supervision for the dissertation. The aim is to stimulate your curiosity and provide you with essential information by means of lectures in the first instance, so as to establish a solid grounding in the core of the subject. In addition, all lecturers have two drop-in sessions per week when you can talk privately with them about your work.

How will I be assessed?
Our assessment methods are designed to develop different skills and strengths. These could include essays, in-class tests, group and one-to-one sessions, poster presentations and final exams. We also provide you with timely and constructive feedback to allow you to improve your work.

If you would like to start preparing for your degree in advance, have a look at some of the books on the year one pre-arrival reading list at nottingham.ac.uk/philosophy/weekone/reading-list

How to apply

All applications for an undergraduate place to study at University of Nottingham, including applications by international students, must be made through UCAS.

Applications should be made online at ucas.com and candidates will be notified of decisions through UCAS Track.

Your personal statement
This is the section of your UCAS form that tells us most about you, and you should make the best use of it. Be as specific and detailed as you can – we would like to see that you are a student who can work hard, be self-motivated and make the best possible use of the opportunities that our courses offer you. We would also like to hear about any skills you have gained through extracurricular activities.

Alternative qualifications
In this guide you will find our A level entry requirements but we accept a much broader range of qualifications.

These include:
- Access to HE Diploma
- Advanced Diploma
- BTEC HND/HNC
- BTEC Extended Diploma
- Cambridge Pre-U
- International Baccalaureate
- Irish Leaving Certificate
- Scottish Advanced Highers
- Welsh Baccalaureate Advanced Diploma

This list is not exhaustive; we will consider applicants with other qualifications on an individual basis. Please contact us to discuss the suitability of your qualification.

Flexible admissions policy
We recognise that some educational and personal circumstances affect achievement. If we judge that you have experienced circumstances that have adversely affected your achievement, we will consider them when assessing your academic potential. Some courses may vary the offer as a result. For the most up to date information about our offers, please see the entry requirements section of our course pages on our online prospectus. For more information about this policy, please see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/applying

Mature applicants
We encourage applications from mature applicants who have a significant gap in education. You should apply in the normal way through UCAS.

More information for mature students can be found at nottingham.ac.uk/mature

International applicants
The University provides a range of information and advice for international applicants. If you are unable to attend an open day, we can meet you in your country at one of our overseas events or arrange an individual visit to the University. For further information please visit nottingham.ac.uk/go/international-applicants

Deferred entry
Applicants who wish to defer their entry by a year will not be at a disadvantage. Please tell us something about your plans for your gap year in your UCAS personal statement.

Equal opportunities policy
The University aims to create the conditions whereby students and staff are treated solely on the basis of their merits, abilities and potential, regardless of gender, race, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, age, socio-economic background, disability, religious or political beliefs, trade union membership, family circumstances, sexual orientation or other irrelevant distinction.

Over one-third of our UK students receive our means-tested core bursary, worth up to £2,000 a year. For details, see nottingham.ac.uk/financialsupport

I was headhunted for a role as a recruitment consultant shortly after graduating and have since trained to be a barrister. I received a full scholarship to study for the Bar and know that this was partly due to the debating and mooting I got involved with at university. Philosophy definitely helped my written and oral advocacy – I am able to argue my point very successfully in mock trials!
