Flexibility and breadth of study for the next generation of global entrepreneurs, thinkers and leaders

Subject choices and innovative curriculum

A liberal arts degree is for ambitious students interested in acquiring a comprehensive education while developing skills valued across a range of sectors. Offering depth and breadth of study across multiple disciplines, it focuses on skills and employability, aiming to prepare the political, intellectual, and creative entrepreneurs of tomorrow.

Core liberal arts teaching

You will receive bespoke training in small groups on what it means to be a liberal arts student, with a focus on cross-cultural problem solving for an interconnected world, putting core skills into practice and working beyond the constraints of a single discipline.

Choice

The curriculum draws upon our world-leading researchers engaged in working on global challenges.

In addition to the core teaching, you will choose from a wide range of subject areas from around the University, enabling you to tailor your interests to your career aspirations. You also have the opportunity to study a language.

Subject areas include American Studies; Archaeology; English Language; English Literature; Film and Television Studies; Geography; History; History of Art; International Media and Communications; Mathematics; Modern Languages; Music; Philosophy; Politics; Psychology; and Sociology.

You will take 40 credits of core modules and 80 credits across optional subject areas. You will also share some activities with our natural sciences students, including presentations, visiting speakers and conferences.

Study abroad

You will have the opportunity to enhance and apply your global learning by spending time overseas.

A course providing you with broad cross-disciplinary skills and perspectives increasingly valued by employers.

As a liberal arts graduate you will be well-prepared to engage ethically with global challenges across multiple sectors. You will be able to think critically, solve complex problems, adapt to change, communicate effectively, and cultivate a global outlook.
