Case study

Heinz – Alex Tabor

Heinz is a global brand with many iconic products consumed Worldwide. IN the UK & Ireland there are 6 manufacturing sites producing everything from oven chips, desserts, ready meals, infant feeding to of course ketchup, beans and soup.

Alex had a placement year at the Kitt Green Factory in Wigan. Whilst there she focused on the area of Food Safety and Quality as part of the Site Quality team. Alex says "The fast paced environment and ever changing daily routine was infectious".

Alex comments: "After graduation I accepted an offer to return to Heinz as a graduate where I am part of an accelerated management scheme. I have had many options to travel across Europe and learn lots about how diverse just one business can be when it is a multi-national one. The wide range of Heinz Products across Europe truly deepens the experience as I see many more processes and factories."

During my placement year and even now I can feel the factual content of my degree really "clicking" into place. Frequently, I find myself looking through my lecture notes at my desk saying "I'm sure we had a lecture about this..."

"Alex's enthusiasm and eagerness to learn was contagious and a breadth of fresh air for the quality team. She tackled every opportunity with energy and showed great initiative."
