

Summer School in Food Sciences

The food industry needs high quality scientists to help it tackle the challenges that we all see in the news everyday : feeding an ever growing and ageing population; tackling obesity; ensuring food is tasty, nutritious and safe to eat; and looking after the environment.

The summer school is designed to give young people a taste of what working in areas like product development, food safety and quality is like and the career opportunities available.

You can help to inspire the next generation of food scientists by sponsoring a participant to attend our Summer School or taking part in the programme delivery.

The Summer School in Food Sciences began in 2009 with 18 participants and has grown to offer 50 participants a place in 2012 and 2013.

Contact

Summerschoolinfoodsciences@nottingham.ac.uk

"It was an outstanding, influential few days, delivered by people passionate about the industry that helped me to envisage what studying a food related degree at university would be like."

Summer School
participant 2013