1 Emilia Banou and Louise Hitchcock. The ‘Lord of Vapheio’: the social identity of the dead and its implications for Laconia in the Late Helladic II-IIIA period

The paper examines the social identity of the dead buried in the cist-grave of the tholos tomb of Vapheio, on the basis of the funerary gifts which accompanied him and the symbolism of the tomb’s architecture. It also combines the evidence from Vapheio with the picture we possess of the Eurotas valley in the LHII-III period.

It is concluded that the occupant of the cist in the Vapheio tholos was an important ruler, having established (at least in the transition from the LHIIA to the LHIIB period) significant contacts with Minoan Crete. These contacts permitted him and his immediate successors to stand at front in the developments of their time in the mainland, having by that time set the territory they controlled on the way to becoming a state. Having their seat presumably on Paliopyrgi, they had to rival at least two other local centres of power in the Eurotas valley, namely Vouno Panayias and Ayios Vassileios, at a close distance. How they may have succeeded in achieving and maintaining their position remains to be elucidated through systematic research and excavation of all three sites, which would also shed light on the process leading to the rise of Mycenaean states in the Argolid, where the same pattern of intervisible important Mycenaean sites can be observed.

2 Diana Burton. God and Hero: the iconography and cult of Apollo at the Amyklaion

Cult and art recognise an ambivalence between Olympian and underworld gods, which is generally lacking in literary sources. The Peloponnesian was rich in divinities who carried epithets associating them with the underworld. This paper explores the iconography of one such divine figure, the statue of Apollo at Amyklai, and his cult, in the context of the associated hero-cult of Hyakinthos.

Θεοί, ήρωες και ο κάτω κόσμος: λατρεία και εικονογραφία

Στην λατρεία και την τέχνη υπάρχει μια διαφορούμενη στάση μεταξύ των Ολύμπιων και χθόνιων θεσπήτων, η οποία όμως δεν εμφανίζεται γενικά στις γραπτές πηγές. Στην
Πελοπόννησο αφθονούν οι θεότητες που έφεσαν επίθετα σχετικά με τον Κάτω Κόσμο. Αυτή η ανακοίνωση ερευνά την εικονογραφία τέτοιων θεοτήτων όπως το άγαλμα του Δίος Μειλίχου, έργο του Πολυκλείτου στο Άργος, και το λατρευτικό άγαλμα του Απόλλωνα στις Αμύκλες, καθώς και την λατρεία τους στο πλαίσιο τοπικών προολατερεμών. Κάποιες λατρείες όπως αυτή του Δίος Μειλίχου, αποτέλεσαν το αντικείμενο διαδεδομένης λατρείας, αν και ενδεχομένως συνεχίζουν χαρακτηριστικά ντόπιας εικονογραφίας.

3 Nikolaos Dimakis. The display of individual status in the burials of Classical and Hellenistic Argos
This paper aims to outline the ways in which burials can be analysed in order to investigate the display of individual status in the mortuary record of Classical and Hellenistic Argos. Subsequently, this study will throw light on social inequality and the degrees of socio-political ranking within the Argive society of the Classical and Hellenistic periods.

Η επίδειξη ατομικής κοινωνικής ταυτότητας στις ταφές του Άργους των κλασικών και ελληνιστικών χρόνων
Σκοπός αυτής της παρουσίασης είναι η αναφορά στον τρόπο με τον οποίο μπορούν να αναλυθούν οι ταφές προκειμένου να ερευνηθεί η επίδειξη ατομικής κοινωνικής ταυτότητας στα ταφικά σύνολα του Άργους κατά τους κλασικούς και ελληνιστικούς χρόνους. Ακολούθως, η παρούσα μελέτη θα διαφωτίσει ζητήματα κοινωνικής ανισότητας και το βαθμό κοινωνικο-πολιτικής διαστροφιμάτωσης στην Αργειακή κοινωνία των κλασικών και ελληνιστικών χρόνων.

4 Eleni Drakaki. Late Bronze Age female burials with hard stone seals from the Peloponnese: a contextual approach
In Mycenaean Greece, hard stone seals were predominantly deposited with burials and are often regarded by scholars as emblems of their owners’ personal and social identity. In an effort to achieve a better understanding of the mechanisms of seal ownership, this paper undertakes a detailed examination of the contextual associations of a small corpus of hard stone seals associated with nine Late Bronze Age elite female burials from the Peloponnese. The conclusion reached is that the seals do not always reflect the wealth/status differences of the burials, while in their overwhelming majority they are not engraved with ‘female appropriate’ motifs. Finally, the comparison of some of these female burials with male burials of equal status helps to establish that the former were furnished more modestly and with significantly fewer seals.

Γυναικείες ταφές της Ύστερης Εποχής του Χαλκού από την Πελοπόννησο με σφραγίδες από σκληρούς λίθους: προσέγγιση πλαισίου.
Η ανακοίνωση αυτή παρουσιάζει μια διαχρονική μελέτη δέκα (πιθανώς) γυναικείων ταφών, οι οποίες είναι κτερισμένες με σφραγίδες από σκληρούς λίθους. Στις περιπτώσεις που αυτό καθίσταται δυνατό, ο πλούτος και τα χαρακτηριστικά κτερίσματα συγκρίνονται με εκείνα συγχρόνων ανδρικών ταφών ανάλογης κοινωνικής θέσης (status), σε μια προσπάθεια να διακρίνουμε διαφορές ή/και ομοιότητες ανάμεσά τους. Ιδιαίτερη προσοχή δίδεται στην εικονογραφία των σφραγίδων, καθώς οι μοτίβα τους εκλαμβάνονται συχνά ως σύμβολα της προσωπικής και κοινωνικής ταυτότητας των κατόχων τους. Το (ίσως) εκπληκτικό συμπέρασμα είναι ότι η χρήση μοτίβων οποιασδήποτε σφραγίδων πιθανότατα δεν μπορούσαν να τρέφουν ως «κατάλληλα για γυναίκες» ήταν η εξαίρεση, ενώ ορισμένες σφραγίδες πιθανώς να έκτισαν για ιδιότητες ανεξάρτητες της εικονογραφίας τους.

5 Rachel S. Fox. Vessels and the body in Early Mycenaean funerary contexts
The capsule-type nature of the Shaft Graves at Mycenae means that they are an ideal dataset upon which to perform an analysis of the vessels found within them. In this paper I examine the metal and ceramic vessels from both Grave Circles, noting the forms that predominate and from these drawing conclusions regarding the ritual practices surrounding the interment of a body and the ways in which social messages could be conveyed to the funeral attendees. Following this, I consider how the vessels can be correlated with sex, age and other grave-goods, thus demonstrating how feasting practices were a method of displaying and accruing socio-political status in the Early Mycenaean period.

Τα αγγεία και το ανθρώπινο σώμα στα ταφικά σύνολα της πρώιμης μυκηναϊκής περιόδου

6 Florentia Fragkopoulou. Sanctuary dedications and the treatment of the dead in Laconia (800–600 BC): the case of Artemis Orthia

This paper focuses on two ivory plaques NM 15518 and NM 16432 retrieved from the sanctuary of Artemis Orthia during the excavations conducted by the British School at Athens during the 1906–10 seasons. The uniqueness of these plaques lies in their iconography (each one is decorated with a prothesis scene which is a rather unusual decorative element for sanctuary dedications), their luxurious material, and the fact that no other ivory parallels of this sort are known from other contemporaneous Lakonian sanctuaries. Since their recovery, scholars have concentrated on their stylistic production and chronological implications within the context of Spartan-Near Eastern relationships during the Archaic period. This paper focuses on their interpretation within the ritual context of the sanctuary of Artemis Orthia itself with the aim of defining their role within the ritual context of the Limnai sanctuary.
Stamatis Fritzilas. Grave stelai and burials in Megalopolis

This paper examines certain representative examples of grave stelai found in the region of the federal capital of ancient Arcadia. These are a small but characteristic group of funerary stelai, mainly of Hellenistic and Roman date, and forming part of the Archaeological Collection of Megalopolis. They are presented with a commentary and illustrated, in some cases for the first time. They comprise characteristic funerary monuments which display not only a particular concern to make the grave visible, but also to preserve the deceased's name, in order to keep his memory alive. The inscribed stelai provide important cultural and demographic information. They enlarge the prosopography of Megalopolis, since they mention certain names of its inhabitants and their family or social relationships. They also include dictums which reflect the spirit of the times, record the passage of the deceased into the next world and ensure his eternal fame. Epigraphic material as well as available data from excavations are brought together. There is a variety of types of burial, brought to light by rescue excavations carried out by the Greek Archaeological Service in the area of Megalopolis, as a result of building activity mainly in the southern part of the ancient city and of public works in the countryside.

Pepi Gavala. The sculpted monuments in Laconian cemeteries (late 19th – early 20th century)

Many funerary monuments in the cemeteries of Greek cities and towns, including those in Laconia, bear the stamp of Classicism, an important school of art in Western Europe during the 18th and 19th centuries, which greatly influenced Greek art and architecture in the 19th century. The identification and recording of those monuments helps their preservation through the ages, since they are constantly at risk of being damaged. The types of monument and their decoration as well as their inscriptions and epigrams are also recorded. The main target of such efforts is focused on an awareness of the historical and aesthetic value of these monuments.

Τα μνημεία των κοιμητηρίων της Λακωνίας

Στην ανακοίνωσή αυτή παρουσιάζονται τα ταφικά μνημεία των Κοιμητηρίων της Λακωνίας του 19ου και 20ου αιώνα (επιτύμβιες στήλες, προτομές, σταυροί, βάθρα, κ.α.).

9 Olivier Gengler. Leonidas and the heroes of Thermopylae: memory of the dead and identity in Roman Sparta

Through a new examination of the evidence relating to the contest organised in Sparta in honour of Pausanias, Leonidas and the Three Hundred, essentially known from Pausanias the Periegete and various inscriptions, this paper proposed a new insight into the construction of Spartan identity in Roman imperial times. A comparison with a text of Plutarch reveals how the organisation of the Leonideia constituted for the Spartan of the second century AD a further attempt to equal their ancestors.

10 Mercourios Georgiadis. Honouring the dead in Mesolithic and Neolithic Peloponnese: a few general observations

The change from the Mesolithic way of life and the introduction of agriculture in the Neolithic period has been fundamental for local societies. New economic and social conditions appeared, transforming at the same time the local belief systems and the way of everyday life. This paper will show how these changes can be traced in the funerary context, where the emphasis was concentrated and how honouring of the dead altered from the Mesolithic to the Neolithic, in the examples we have from the Peloponnese. Although the available examples are very limited for these long periods of time, they can provide useful insights into the social conditions of these phases.

11 Grigoris Grigorakakis. New investigations by the 39th Ephoreia of Prehistoric and Classical Antiquities at Helleniko, N. Kynouria. The burial of Late Classical date from the western roadside cemetery

200 m west of the grave enclosure on the west slopes of Teichio at Helleniko in northern Kynouria, in the framework of rescue excavations by the Ephoria, a tomb of the mid-4th century BC was investigated. The large number of offerings categorizes it as a ‘wealthy’ burial, and provides us with valuable information both about the mortuary practices, and about the conception of the next world. Finally, the location of the grave, the extent of the cemetery along the road and its relationship both to other cemeteries in the vicinity and, in particular, to the spectacular acropolis at Teichio, indicates the significance of this site in the Thyreatis.

Nέες έρευνες της ΛΘ΄ Εφορείας Προϊστορικών και Κλασικών Αρχαιοτήτων στο Ελληνικό βόρειας Κυνουρίας. Η ταφή των ύστερων κλασικών χρόνων του δυτικού παρόδου νεκροταφείου Διακόσια μέτρα δυτικότερα των περιφραγμένων τάφων στις δυτικές υπώρειες του Τειχίου, στο Ελληνικό της βόρειας Κυνουρίας, στο πλαίσιο σωστικής ανασκαφής της Εφορείας διερευνήθηκε τάφος των μέσων του 4ου π.Χ. αι. Ο μεγάλος αριθμός κτερισμάτων παραπέμπει σε 'πλούσια' ταφή, και μας δίδει παλιντιμίες πληροφορίες τόσο για τα ταφικά εύμαθη, όσο και για τις αντιλήψεις σχετικά με τον επέκεινα κόσμο. Τέλος, η θέση του τάφου, η έκταση του παρόδου νεκροταφείου και η σχέση του με τα άλλα νεκροταφεία στην περιοχή, και κυρίως με την επιβλητική Ακρόπολη στο Τειχίο, καταδεικνύει και τη σπουδαιότητα της θέσης αυτής της Θυρεάτιδος.

12 Georgia Kakourou-Chroni. Nikiforos Vrettakos: “Let us depart ascending ...”

The poetry of Laconian-born Nikiforos Vrettakos might be said to have death as one of its defining themes. This paper traces the development of the poetical ego from his first collection where “death permeates”, to his last where “light rises from the soul”. The transition begins to take shape and form during World War II when death has the power to “kill God” but also to “shed light on the pain of the world”.

The purpose of this paper is to introduce the attitude to death that emerges in the poetry of Nikiforos Vrettakos and unfolds in three stages: nihilism and the dominance of death; heroic death; and the recognition of human immortality.

Critical studies of a lifetime of literary work seen as a whole frequently divide the work into periods on the basis of certain characteristics that pervade each one. This approach is widely accepted by both critics and readers since it facilitates study, though they recognise the fact that the periods are not separated by brick walls and the characteristics of one period overlap those of the next, often making it difficult to see where one period ends and another begins. Neither do all concerned agree over the timeframes.

Having pointed this out, I shall refer to the three different attitudes to death that evolve in the poetry of Nikiforos Vrettakos, keeping within the constraints of time imposed by an introduction of this kind. These attitudes are: nihilism and the dominance of death; heroic death; and the recognition of human immortality.

Νικηφόρος Βρεττάκος: «ας φεύγουμε ανεβαίνοντας ...»

Η ποιητική του λάκωνα λογοτέχνη Νικηφόρου Βρεττάκου θα μπορούσε να ισχυρισθεί κανείς ότι οριοθετείται και από το θέμα του θανάτου. Στην ανακοίνωση αυτή καταγράφεται, από την πρώτη συλλογή, η ποιηματική του ποιητικός εγώ, όταν «υπερκαλύπτεται από τον θάνατο», ώστε η τελευταία που «ψωνίζει η ψυχή του». Η μεταστροφή αυτή αρχίζει να συντελείται κατά το Δεύτερο Παγκόσμιο Πόλεμο, τότε που ο θάνατος μπορεί να «δολοφονεί το Θεό», αλλά και να «φωτίζει τον παγκόσμιο πόνο».

13 Konstantinos Kalogeropoulos. The Social and religious significance of palatial jars as grave offerings

It is generally accepted that the monumental and very finely painted jars found mainly during LH II A in rich Peloponnesian tombs (so called palatial jars) are prestige items connected with the early Mycenaean Peloponnesian elite. The aim of this paper is not to refute the basic idea behind such a general identification but to enlarge upon it. It is argued that the use of ‘palatial jars’ in mortuary ceremonies has a certain religious connotation also, since several syntactic and iconographic elements on these vases point to their ritual use and symbolism.

14 Dimitrios Katsoulakos. The lament in southern ‘koile Lakedaimon’ and the turbulent history of Greece
The Moiroloí carries within it historical witness to the collective memory. It is a treasury of the human reaction to extreme experiences. The violent events undergone by the nation (the Balkan Wars, the War in Asia Minor, the Greco-Italian War, the Civil War) deeply moved the popular sensibility, which lamented in an imaginative manner the untimely death of the young. What is particularly striking in researching this brilliant literature is the theme of injustice, which is never personalised. The injustice lies only in the loss of a young life.

15 Theodoros Katsoulakos. The relationship of the moiroloí singer with the deceased as a source of inspiration Vital data for research into the Moiroloí are the date of its recording and knowledge of the relationship between the singer and the deceased. If these facts are known, the researcher will have at their disposal a picture of the circumstances of its composition, insofar as this is possible. The Moiroloí, as a discrete artistic creation, must, for this reason, be accompanied by as much information as possible.

16 Georgia Kokkorou-Alevras. Funerary statuary of the Archaic period in the Peloponnese
During the Archaic period in Attica and in the Aegean islands there are many stone funerary monuments commemorating the dead. These monuments include a variety of statuary types such as kouroi and korai, lions, sphinxes, gorgons and so forth as well as the more common relief stelai bearing representations of the dead. On the other hand, the number of stone funerary monuments in the Peloponnese is very small and consists mainly of statues of lions, rarely of sphinxes and other types. It seems most probable that the statues of lions, which were represented sitting on high columns that were erected over the tombs, symbolized the bravery of the dead as indicated by the ancient written sources.

The fact that the Peloponnesian funerary statuary has been found mainly in the territory of Corinth and in the Argolid, may be explained by the vicinity of these areas to Attica and the Cycladic islands and by the influence exercised by these areas in the north-east Peloponnese.

Finally, the main reason for the general rarity of funerary sculpture in the Peloponnese may be the different, 'Doric' ideal that existed in this area and which is documented by the Spartan, Lykourgan, attitude towards honouring the dead, which did not favour the distinction of the individual through lavish grave monuments.

17 Eleni Konstantintidi-Syvridi and Konstantinos Paschalidis. Honouring the dead behind the scenes: the case of the chamber tomb to the south of Grave Circle B at Mycenae

During the summers of 1952 and 1953 in the course of the excavations of Grave Circle B at Mycenae, Ioannis Papadimitriou located and excavated an Early Mycenaean chamber tomb, which has remained unpublished up to now. Its location and the finds from the tomb preserve information about the granting of honours to the dead and ancestors over the ensuing periods, with a different content on each occasion. Following analysis of the architectural form and the offerings in the tomb, the evidence for hero worship is examined, which was the excavator’s interpretation of the rich remains of the Late Geometric period from within and above the chamber. Likewise, the proximity of a number of important funerary monuments (Grave Circle B, the Tomb of Clytemnestra, the chamber tomb) to the Hellenistic theatre of the town, where the tragedies of the Atreids would have been re-enacted, is emphasised. Finally, the memory of the excavator is honoured, whose diaries reveal the thoughts of a great archaeologist and the concerns of an everyday human being.

Τιμώντας τους νεκρούς στα παρασκήνια: η περίπτωση του θαλαμωτού τάφου νότια του Κύκλου Β των Μυκηνών

Τα καλοκαίρια του 1952 και του 1953 κατά την ανασκαφή του ταφικού Κύκλου Β, ο Ιωάννης Παπαδημητρίου εντόπισε και ανέσκαψε έναν πρώιμο μυκηναϊκό θαλαμωτό τάφο, που παρέμεινε αδημοσίευτος έως σήμερα. Η θέση και τα ευρήματα του τάφου διευκρινίζουν στοιχεία για την απόδοση τιμών σε νεκρούς και προγόνους σε διαδοχικές χρονικές περιόδους και με διαφορετικό κάθε φορά περιεχόμενο. Μετά την αναλυτική παρουσίαση της αρχιτεκτονικής και των κτερισμάτων του τάφου, εξετάζονται τα στοιχεία της ηρωολατρείας, όπως ερμήνευσε ο ανασκαφέας τα πλούσια κατάλοιπα της ύστερης Γεωμετρικής περιόδου μέσα και πάνω από το θάλαμο. Σχολιάζεται επίσης η εντύπωση των σημαντικών ταφικών μνημείων (Κύκλος Β, θολωτός Κλυταιμνήστρας, θαλαμωτός τάφος) με το ελληνιστικό θέατρο της πόλης, όπου αναβίωναν τα πάθη των Ατρειδών. Τέλος, αποτίεται φόρος τιμής στον ανασκαφέα, τα ημερολόγια του οποίου αποκαλύπτουν τις σκέψεις ενός μεγάλου αρχαιολόγου και τις ανησυχίες ενός καθημερινού ανθρώπου.

18 Angeliki Kossyva. The invisible dead of Delpriza, Kranidi

Despite the wealth of data for habitation in the southern Argolid from very early times, very little is known about the framework of society and its economy during the Early Bronze Age as it can be established through the burials and the behaviour of the community towards the dead.

As regards the Classical period also, the tombs of ordinary people reveal unknown aspects of the organization of small rural communities of the region, the economic potential and the external contacts of the rural population living in the shadow of the urban centres of Hermione and Halieis.

Some aspects of the above-mentioned points were possible to be detected through the finds of the rescue excavation in the Delpriza area, which is only 2.5 km away from the Franchthi cave and about 8 km from Halieis.

Οι αφανείς νεκροί της Δέλπριζας Κρανιδίου

Η αποκάλυψη τμήματος ενός οργανωμένου νεκροταφείου μιας αγροτικής κοινότητας των ύστερων κλασικών-ελληνιστικών χρόνων, στο πλαίσιο σωστικής ανασκαφής που διενεργείται από τη Δ’ ΕΠΚΑ στην περιοχή 'Δέλπριζα' Κρανιδίου, συνχρετίζεται με την περιορισμένη παρουσία νεκροταφείων στο αρχαιολογικό τοπίο της Αργολίδας. Δύο χιλιόμετρα νότια από το Φράγχθι και 2,5 χλμ. ανατολικά του χωριού της Κοιλάδας, στην ευρύτερη περιοχή της οποίας τοποθετείται και η αρχαία πόλη Μάση, ανιχνεύουμε μέσα από τις ταφικές πρακτικές την οικονομική επιφάνεια απλών ανθρώπων.

19 Sokratis S. Koursoumis and Anna-Vassiliki Karapanagiotou. Anthropomorphic stele from Levidi, Arcadia: a typological and interpretative study

The anthropomorphic stele of Levidi is one of the earliest colossal statues of Arcadian monumental sculpture, dated in the late 7th – early 6th century BC. Due to its size, shape and monumental character, it is interpreted as a funerary monument, erected on a tomb in the north Orkomenian plain, which probably belonged to Aristokrates, the mythical king of Arcadia punished by death for his sacrilege.

Ανθρωπόμορφη στήλη από το Λεβίδι Αρκαδίας: τυπολογική και ερμηνευτική προσέγγιση

Η ανθρωπόμορφη στήλη του Λεβιδίου αποτελεί ένα από τα πρωιμότερα, κολοσσικά έργα της αρκαδικής μεγάλης πλαστικής, χρονολογούμενη περί το τέλος του 7ος - αρχές του 6ου αιώνα π.Χ. Το μέγεθος, η μορφή και ο μνημειώδης χαρακτήρας της οδηγούν στην εμφάνιση της ως επιτάφιος μνημείο, ανιδρυμένο στο βόρειο ορχομένιο πεδίο, σε τύμβο ο οποίος πεθανόν ανήκε στον αρχαία βασιλιά Αριστοκράτη, που τιμωρήθηκε με θάνατο λόγω των αναταραχηγημάτων του.

20 Marioanna Louka. Votive jewellery in the Archaic Peloponnese

Jewellery in the Peloponnese is characterized by various categories, ranging from sumptuous earrings to carefully crafted pins, fibulae and bracelets. These specimens, recovered either from a funerary or a sanctuary/votive context, reveal the local workshops’ artistic connections with other important artistic centres of the time on the Greek mainland and the islands, as well as the impact of earlier traditions. The Peloponnese provides us with a very interesting research field, as these finds prove that the restrictions imposed by the Spartan regime evidently did not apply to all regions, nor to all circumstances in the life of Peloponnesian women – and therefore speak of the multi-levelled character of this centuries-old and ever appealing craft.

Η κοινωνική προέκταση των κτερισματικών και αναθηματικών κοσμημάτων στην αρχαϊκή Πελοπόννησο
Τα κοσμήματα της αρχαϊκής περιόδου από την Πελοπόννησο με την σημαντική τους τυπολογία, από τα πολυτελή ενώτια έως τις πόρπες, τις πόρπες και τα ψέλια, αναδεικνύουν τις δημιουργικές σχέσεις των τοπικών εργαστηρίων με άλλα σημαντικά καλλιτεχνικά κέντρα της εποχής στην κυρίως Ελλάδα και τα νησιά, καθώς και με παλαιότερες παραδόσεις. Η Πελοποννησιακή γη αποτελεί ένα ενδιαφέρον πεδίο έρευνας σχετικά με τα ταφικά είδη, όπως αυτά εκφράζονται μέσα από τα κοσμήματα που συνόδευαν τις γυναικείες-κατόχους τους στο επέκεινα, αλλά και τα κοσμήματα στην κοινωνική τους διάσταση, όταν αυτά διατηρούνταν στους κόλπους της οικογένειας ως προίκα ή για να αναπτύξουν στα μεγάλα ιερά της εποχής, προβάλλοντας έτσι τον πολλαπλό χαρακτήρα αυτής της πανάρχαιας τέχνης που συνεχίζει να μας γοητεύει.

21 Jean-Marc Luce. Iron Age burial customs in the Peloponnese and their place in the funerary geography of the Greek world
As appears from a wide survey of more than 6000 Iron Age graves in the Greek world, burial practices in the Peloponnese are very similar to those in Akarnania, Aitolia and Lokris. Comparison of the map of burial types based on the above with the dialect map affords surprising and unexpected results. The striking difference between the practices in the Peloponnese and those described by Homer should be noted. The role of burials in signalling ethnic identity will also be discussed. Specifically, the question raised here is whether the graves of this period can be interpreted as ‘geo-symbols’ as defined by the geographer Joël Bonnemaison in ‘Voyage autour du patrimoine’ Espace géographique 4 (1981) 249-62.

Ταφικά έδη της Εποχής του Σιδήρου στην Πελοπόννησο και η θέση τους στην ταφική γεωγραφία του ελληνικού κόσμου Όπως προκύπτει από μία ευρύτερη έρευνα περισσοτέρων των 6000 τάφων της Εποχής του Σιδήρου στον Ελλαδικό κόσμο, οι ταφικές πρακτικές στην Πελοπόννησο παρουσιάζουν ομοιότητες με αυτές της Ακαρνανίας, Αιτωλίας και Λοκρίδας. Με βάση τα παραπάνω στοιχεία η σύγκριση στον χάρτη των ταφικών τύπων με τον χάρτη των διαλέκτων προσφέρει εκπληκτικά και απροσδόκητα αποτελέσματα. Πρέπει να σημειωθεί ότι η εμπειρία η εντυπωσιακή διαφορά μεταξύ των πρακτικών στην Πελοπόννησο και αυτών που περιγράφονται στον Όμηρο. Θα συζητηθεί επίσης ο ρόλος των τάφων στη σηματοδότηση εθνικής ταυτότητας. Συγκεκριμένα, το ερώτημα που τίθεται είναι κατά πόσον οι τάφοι της περιόδου αυτής μπορούν να εμφανείς ως «γεω-σύμβολο», όπως αυτά έχουν φιλοτεχθεί από τον γεωγράφο Joël Bonnemaison στο έργο του «Voyage autour du Patrimoine» στο Espace géographique 4 (1981) 249-62.

22 Christina Marabea. The tholos tomb at Kambos, Avia: excavation by Christos Tsountas, 1891
This paper is a short presentation of the Mycenaean tholos tomb at Kambos, Avia (prefecture of Messinia) whose full study and publication has been undertaken by the author. The tomb, investigated by Christos Tsountas in 1891, was found looted; however, it yielded a number of small objects, among them two well-known lead figurines of Minoan character. Of particular importance are the reports and other documents, now deposited in the Archives of the Archaeological Society at Athens, in which Christos Tsountas revealed aspects of his investigation. Preliminary estimates are put forward for the dating of the monument and historical implications are outlined.

Ο θολωτός τάφος στον Κάμπο Αβίας: η ανασκαφή του Χρήστου Τσούντα, 1891

Το παρόν άρθρο αποτελεί σύντομη παρουσίαση του Μυκηναϊκού θολωτού τάφου στον Κάμπο Αβίας (Νομού Μεσσηνίας), του οποίου η πλήρης μελέτη και δημοσίευση έχει αναλαμβάνει η υπογραφόμενη. Ο τάφος, ο οποίος ερευνήθηκε από τον Χρήστο Τσούντα το 1891, βρέθηκε συλημένος. Ωστόσο, απέδωσε αριθμό μικροαντικειμένων, μεταξύ των οποίων τα δύο γνωστά μολύβδινα ειδώλια Μινωικού τύπου. Ιδιαίτερη σημασία έχουν οι αναφορές και τα άλλα έγγραφα, σήμερα στο Αρχείο της Εν Αθήναις Αρχαιολογικής Εταιρείας, όπου ο Χρήστος Τσούντας αποκαλύπτει πλευρές της έρευνάς του. Δίδονται πρώτες εκτιμήσεις για τη χρονολόγηση του μνημείου και διαγράφονται ιστορικές προεκτάσεις.

23 Eleni Marantou. Ancestor worship and hero cult in the central and southern Peloponnese: the evidence from Pausanias

In antiquity, ancestors and heroes held a special place in people’s memory and in their hearts. It was extremely common for funerary monuments of distinguished individuals to be set up in conspicuous places, and frequently cult ceremonies took place to honour them. In his guide, Pausanias describes inter alia the funerary monuments which he encounters. The present paper will bring together the many funerary monuments which Pausanias noted in Arcadia, Elis, Messenia and Laconia with the aim of identifying the location of the funerary cults, in order to link them with the history of the region and to understand the reasons behind their existence.

Οι πρόγονοι και οι ήρωες κατείχαν ιδιαίτερη θέση στη μνήμη και την καρδιά των ανθρώπων κατά την αρχαιότητα. Η εγκαθίδρυση ταφικών μνημείων για εξέχουσες προσωπικότητες σε περίβλεπτα σημεία αποτελούσε σύνθετο φαινόμενο, ενώ συχνά αφιερώνονταν θρησκευτικές τελευταίες προς τιμή τους. Στην Περιηγήση του ο Παυσανίας περιγράφει, εκτός αλλών, τα ταφικά μνημεία που συναντά. Συγκεντρώνοντας τα στοιχεία για όλα τα ταφικά μνημεία που αναφέρει ο Παυσανίας στους νομούς Αρκαδίας, Ηλείας, Μεσσηνίας και Λακωνίας και εντοπίζοντας τους χώρους ταφικής θατρείας, σκοπός της παρούσας ανακοίνωσης είναι η σύνδεσή τους με την ιστορία της καθε περιοχής και η κατανόηση των λόγων εγκαθιδρύσής τους.

24 Iro Mathioudaki. Honouring the dead with polychrome pots: the case of Mainland Polychrome pottery in Peloponnesian funerary contexts (an interpretative approach)

The subject of this paper concerns the fine pottery type of the early Late Helladic period, known as ‘Mainland Polychrome’, well represented in the Shaft Graves at Mycenae and sometimes decorated with pictorial motives such as birds and griffins. The pottery has specific character and function, being elaborate and technologically advanced; it carries a certain aesthetic value. The example provides an appropriate case-study for the application of theoretical models developed and tested by Material Culture Studies (i.e. aesthetics, object biographies), also taking methodological issues into consideration. Pottery with such inherent qualitative properties becomes the material manifestation of concepts developed and expressed by “communities of the dead” of a certain spatio-temporal context.

Τιμώντας τους νεκρούς με πολύχρωμα αγγεία: η περίπτωση της ηπειρωτικής πολύχρωμης κεραμικής στα ταφικά σύνολα της Πελοποννήσου (ερμηνευτική προσέγγιση)
Το θέμα μου είναι η λεπτή κεραμεική της Πρώιμης Ύστεροελλαδικής περιόδου, γνωστή ως «ηπειρωτική πολύχρωμη κεραμεική», η οποία εκπροσωπείται στους Κάθετους Λακκοειδείς Τάφους των Μυκηνών και είναι συχνά διακοσμημένη με εικονιστικά μοτίβα όπως πουλιά και γρύπες. Η κεραμεική έχει ιδιαίτερο χαρακτήρα και λειτουργία, επεξεργασμένη με ακρίβεια και τεχνολογικά προηγμένη. Φέρει δε μια συγκεκριμένη αισθητική αξία. Αυτό το υλικό προσφέρει την κατάλληλη βάση για την εφαρμογή των θεωρητικών μοντέλων που αναπτύσσονται και δοκιμάζονται σε μελέτες υλικού πολιτισμού (π.χ. αισθητική, βιογραφίες αντικειμένων). Μεθοδολογικά ζητήματα θα ληφθούν επίσης υπ' όψη. Η κεραμεική αυτού του είδους που διαθέτει τέτοιες ποιοτικές και εγγενείς ιδιότητες, γίνεται η υλική εκδήλωση εννοιών που αναπτύσσονται και εκφράζονται από την «κοινότητα των νεκρών» σε ένα συγκεκριμένο χωροχρονικό πλαίσιο.

25 Sotiris Lambropoulos, Panagiotis Moutzouridis and Kostas Nikolentzos. Hybrid burial monuments of the Late Bronze Age in two recently excavated sites in Elis (Strephi and Arvaniti)

This paper reviews the conclusions of archaeological research on two new sites of the Late Bronze Age, in the municipal prefectures of Strephi and Arvanitis (prefecture of Elis). The sites present particular interest, because of the diversity of burial architecture (co-existence of chamber tombs, burial pits and niches). In addition, burial customs, social stratification, anthropological data and possible interregional contacts are also being studied.

Υβριδικά ταφικά μνημεία της Ύστερης Εποχής του Χαλκού σε δύο νέες θέσεις του Χαλκού σε δύο νέες θέσεις του νομού Ηλείας (Στρέφι και Αρβανίτη)

Η ανακοίνωση πραγματεύεται τα ανασκαφικά πορίσματα της έρευνας σε δύο νέες θέσεις της Ύστερης Εποχής του Χαλκού, στα Δ.Δ. Στρεφίου και Αρβανίτη. Οι θέσεις παρουσιάζουν τεχνολογικά και αρχαιολογικά μοτίβα και είναι περισσότερο υλικά των υπολογιστών. Σε δεύτερο επίπεδο, εξετάζονται έθιμα ταφής, η κοινωνική διακρίσεις, ανθρωπολογικά δεδομένα και πιθανές επαφές με άλλες περιοχές.

26 Nikolas Papadimitriou. "Passing away" or “passing through”? Changing funerary attitudes in the Peloponnese at the MBA/LBA transition

This paper examines the formation and the possible symbolic meaning of the dromos-stomion-chamber layout in Mycenaean tombs. This distinctive arrangement was the outcome of a gradual restructuring of the funerary space associated with the adoption of multiple burial and the need for a permanent access to the tomb. The form of access originated in the tumulus tradition, went through an experimental stage and crystallized in the dromoi of LH II A tombs. It is argued that the observed changes in funerary attitudes were not motivated by competition among ‘powerful elites’; rather, they reflect an increasing sophistication in ritual performance and symbolic representation, resulting from a widespread renegotiation of social identities in the MH/LH transition.

"Πεθαίνοντας" ή "μεταβαίνοντας"; Η αλλαγή ταφικής νοοτροπίας στην Πελοπονήσιο κατά τη μετάβαση από τη Μέση στην Ύστερη Εποχή του Χαλκού

Το άρθρο εξετάζει την διαδικασία διαμόρφωσης της χαρακτηριστικής διάταξης των μυκηναϊκών τάφων σε δρόμο, στόμιο και θάλαμο, και την πιθανή συμβολική σημασία της. Καταδεικνύεται ότι η διάταξη αυτή προέκυψε σταδιακά ως αποτέλεσμα της υιοθέτησης του ειδικού του οικογενειακού τάφος και της ανάγκης διαρκούς πρόσβασης στον τάφο. Το είδος της πρόσβασης αυτής αρχίζει να διαμορφώνεται στους ΜΕ τύμβους, πέρασε από ένα στάδιο πειραματισμού και αποκρυπταλλώθηκε κατά την ΤΕ ΙΙ Α περίοδο. Προτείνεται ότι οι παρατηρούμενες αλλαγές στα ταφικά έθιμα δεν οφείλονται σε κοινωνικές ανταγωνισμούς μεταξύ «ισχυρών ελίτ» αλλά αντανακλούν μια ευρύτερη αναδιαπραγμάτευση των κοινωνικών ταυτοτήτων κατά την μεταβατική ΜΕ/ΥΕ περίοδο, η οποία οδήγησε στην υιοθέτηση συνθετότερων τελετουργιών και μορφών συμβολικής αναπαράστασης.

27 Metaxia Papapostolou. ‘Honourable death’: the honours paid in ancient Sparta to dead war-heroes and mothers dying in child-birth

In accordance with a levelling tendency in Spartan life, its burial and funerary customs were simple and austere. Offerings were not allowed at Spartan funerals. The Spartans observed a law in their code concerning burial, under which, according to Pausanias, it was not permitted to inscribe the name of the deceased over their graves, with the exceptions only of men who died in battle and women who died in child-birth. Modern historians have speculated that only through dying in child-birth could a Spartan woman earn the distinction of escaping anonymity. Sparta has been distinguished as the city which advocated the ideal of a ‘good death’ for a citizen who died in the front line, a death which Tyrtaios praises in his poetry. Certainly the female version of the ‘good death’ did not extend beyond the boundaries of Lacedaemon. Consequently, the high esteem held for death in child-birth must be explained strictly within the bounds of Sparta. In this paper reference will be made in turn to the honours which the Spartans paid to those who died in battle and at the same time we shall examine which women could gain the privilege of such honours. In other words, were death in battle and death in child-birth held in equal esteem?

Ο ‘τιμημένος θάνατος’: οι τιμές στον νεκρό ήρωα της μάχης και στη γυναίκα λεχώνα στην αρχαία Σπάρτη

Ανάλογες με την ομοιομορφία της Σπαρτιατικής ζωής ήταν και οι επικήδειες και ταφικές τελετές, λιτές και αυστηρές. Στις Σπαρτιατικές κηδείες δεν επιτρέπονταν κτερίσματα. Οι Σπαρτιάτες υπάκουαν σε μια επιταγή της νομοθεσίας τους για την ταφή, δυνάμει της οποίας, σύμφωνα με τον Πλούταρχο, δεν επιτρέποταν να αναγράφονται πάνω στους τάφους τα ονόματα των νεκρών, εκτός εάν επρόκειτο για άνδρες που έπεσαν στον πόλεμο και γυναίκες που πέθαναν στον τοκετό. Οι σύγχρονοι ιστορικοί έχουν θεωρήσει ότι μόνο το γεγονός του θανάτου στον τοκετό θα μπορούσε να δώσει σε μια Σπαρτιάτισσα το δικαίωμα να ξεφύγει από την ανωνυμία. Η Σπάρτη θεωρούσαν η πόλη που είχε επινόησε το ιδανικό του ‘καλό θανάτο’ για τον πολίτη που έπεσε στην πρώτη γραμμή, του θανάτου που εξυμνεί ο Τυρταίος. Βέβαια, η γυνακεία ειδοχή του ‘καλού θανάτου’ δεν περνά καθόλου εξω από τα σύνορα της Λακεδαίμονος. Ετσι, η υπερεκτίμηση θανάτου κατά τον τοκετό πρέπει να εξηγηθεί με όρους καθαρά Σπαρτιατικούς. Στην εισήγησή μας θα αναφερθούμε διεξοδικά στις τιμές που απέδειχαν οι Σπαρτιάτες στους νεκρούς της μάχης και παράλληλα θα εξετάσουμε ποιες ήταν οι γυναίκες που μπορούσαν να κερδίσουν το προνόμιο αυτών των τιμών. ‘Αραγε ήταν ισοδύναμος ο θάνατος στη μάχη και ο θάνατος στον τοκετό;

28 Lena Papazoglou-Manioudaki. Dishonouring the dead: the plundering of tholos tombs in the Early Palatial period and the case of the tholos tomb at Mygdalia hill (Petroto) in Achaea

The tholos tombs in Achaea, at the Mygdalia hill, Kallithea and Pharai were built in LH II and their main use came to an abrupt end in LH IIIA. This applies to most of the tholos tombs excavated at the non-palatial centres on the Greek mainland. The plundering of the interior of the tholos is usually violent, maybe deliberate, and their later use as ossuaries and for unfurnished burials does not constitute a proper reuse. The destruction of early Mycenaean settlements at the same period adds to the picture of the disturbances at the transition to the Mycenaean palatial period.
Ατιμάζοντας τους νεκρούς. Η λεηλασία των θολωτών τάφων στην Πρώιμη Ανακτορική περίοδο και η περίπτωση του θολωτού τάφου στο λόφο της Μυγδαλιάς (Πετρωτό) στην Αχαία

Οι θολωτοί τάφοι της Αχαίας στο λόφο Μυγδαλιά, Καλλιθέα και Φαραί είναι κτισμένοι στην ΥΕ II και η κύρια χρήση τους τερματίζεται αιφνίδια στην ΥΕ IIIA. Αυτό ισχύει για τους περισσότερους θολωτούς τάφους που ανασκάφηκαν σε μη ανακτορικά κέντρα στην Πελοπόννησο. Η λεηλασία του εσωτερικού του τάφου είναι συνήθως βίαια και η μετέπειτα χρήση τους ως οστεοθήκων και ως ακτέριστων τάφων δεν συνιστά πρέπουσα επαναχρησιμοποίησή τους. Η πρόωρη καταστροφή των μυκηναϊκών οικισμών κατά την ίδια περίοδο, η οποία βεβαιώνεται επίσης στο Αίγιο στην Αχαία, έρχεται να προσθέσει στην εικόνα των διαταραχών που σηματοδοτούν την έναρξη της περιόδου αυτής.

29 Annalisa Paradiso. Did Herodotus ever see the list of the Three Hundred?

“In that travail - says Herodotus - fell Leonidas, fighting most gallantly, and with him other famous Spartans, whose names I have learnt for their great worth and desert, as I have learnt besides the names of all the three hundred” [Hdt.7.224]. In this emphatic and very dense sentence, Herodotus expresses his judgement about Leonidas, when he tells us of his death, and about the warriors who died with him. Leonidas was aristos; to a lesser degree, the others were onomastoi. He claims to have gathered information about these axioi men, about all the Three Hundred. The emphasis here covers a logical contraction of his thought: he declares that he has gained information; however this information apparently concerns only their names and even all the names, not their deeds. Herodotus perhaps knows all these warriors’ names, but evidently he does not quote them all. On the other hand, he evidently knows something else, not simply their names but also the last exploits of some of them, the positive or negative last deeds or sayings of six of them: Dienekes, Alpheios, Maron, Euritios, Aristodemos and Pantites. Where did Herodotus derive his information from? An official list or oral sources? Did he see the official list inscribed on the stele and described by Pausanias 3.14? Can we deduce anything from the very form of Herodotus’ declaration?

Είδε άραγε ποτέ ο Ηρόδοτος τον κατάλογο των Τριακοσίων;

«καὶ Λεωνίδης τε ἐν τούτῳ τῷ πόνῳ πίπτει ἀνήρ γενόμενος ἀριστος καὶ ἑτεροι μετ’ αὐτοῦ ὄνομαστοι Σπαρτιητεῖς, τῶν ἐγὼ ὡς ἀνδρῶν ἀξίων γενομένων ἐπιθύμην τὰ οὐνόματα, ἐπιθύμημε δὲ καὶ άπαντὸν τῶν τρικοσίων» (Ηροδ. 7.224). Σε αυτή την δυνατή και πολύ δραματική φράση, ο Ηρόδοτος εκφράζει την εκτίμησή του για τον Λεωνίδα, όταν μας εξιστορεί το θάνατό του, και για τους πολεμιστές που έχασαν τη ζωή τους μαζί του. Ο Λεωνίδας ήταν αριστος. Σε μικρότερο βαθμό, οι υπόλοιποι ήταν ονομαστοί. Ο ίδιος ισχυρίζεται ότι έχει συγκεντρώσει πληροφορίες σχετικά με αυτούς τους αξίως άνδρες, σχετικά με όλους τους Τρικοσίους. Η εμφασισμένη κατανόηση ένα γραφούσε στη σκέψη του: δηλώνει ότι έχει συγκεντρώσει πληροφορίες, ωστόσο αυτές φαίνεται να αφορούν μόνο τα ονόματα τους, ακόμη και όλα τα ονόματα, όχι όμως και τα ανδραγαθήματά τους. Ο Ηρόδοτος ίσως γνωρίζει τα ονόματα όλων των πολεμιστών, αλλά δεν τα παραθέτει όλα. Αντιθέτως γνωρίζει προφανώς, όχι απλά τα ονόματά τους, αλλά και τα τελευταία καταθέματα κάποιων, τις τελευταίες θετικές ή αρνητικές πράξεις ή ρήσεις των έξι εξ αυτών: των Διηνέκη, Αλφείου, Μάρωνος, Ευρίτου, Αριστόδημου και Παντίτη. Από πού άντλησε ο Ηρόδοτος τις πληροφορίες αυτές; Από επίσημο κατάλογο ή από προφανείς πηγές; Μήπως είδε τον επίσημο κατάλογο που αναγράφοταν στη στήλη και περιγράφεται από τον Παυσανία (3.14); Μπορούμε να φάσουμε σε συμπεράσματα από την ίδια τη μορφή της δήλωσής του Ηρόδοτος;

30 George C. Paraskeviotis. Agamemnon’s death in Seneca

Agamemnon was a mythical figure of high importance in the ancient world, whose life and death inspired several works in Greek and Roman literature. The main aim of this paper is to offer a detailed examination of the way in which Seneca uses and manipulates Agamemnon's death in his tragedy Agamemnon. A parallel reading with earlier Greek literary treatments of the same incident will enable us, through close examination of the similarities and differences, to find out its literary role and function in the Roman tragic play.

Ο θάνατος του Αγαμέμνονα στον Σενέκα
Ο Αγαμέμνονας, του οποίου η ζωή και ο θάνατος αποτέλεσε πηγή έμπνευσης για σημαντικούς εκπροσώπους της αρχαίας ελληνικής και ρωμαϊκής λογοτεχνίας, υπήρξε προαιρετικός μεθοδικός θρύλος της αρχαίας κατά την οποία ο Σενέκας χειρίζεται τον θάνατο του Αγαμέμνονα στην τραγωδία Agamemnon. Σύγκριση και παράλληλη ανάγνωση με αντίστοιχες περιγραφές όπως αυτές αντλούνται από την προγενέστερη λογοτεχνική παράδοση (ελληνική και ρωμαϊκή) μας επιτρέπει να εντοπίσουμε ομοιότητες και διαφορές γύρω από την περιγραφή του θανάτου του ήρωα, και έτσι να κρίνουμε πως η θρησκευτική οργάνωση του Σενέκα, αλλά και την ιδιαίτερη χειρισμό της έννοιας του θανάτου στις τραγωδίες του.

31 Nicolette Pavlides. Worshipping heroes: civic identity and the veneration of the communal dead in Archaic Sparta
This paper examines the role of hero cult in the creation of communal identity in Archaic Sparta. Through the analysis of the archaeological evidence it treats the gradual development of a Spartan community identity between the 7th and 5th centuries BC. This paper argues that heroic cult both influenced and was influenced by the communal consciousness arising at this time. In particular, it contends that the area of Limnai, rich in Geometric burials, became a focus of hero cult from the 7th century onwards. The cult site on Stauffert Street offers a paradigmatic example of this phenomenon.

Η λατρεία τοπικών ηρώων: η εκ νέου ανακάλυψη της ταφής και η ταυτότητα στη Σπάρτη
Η ανακοίνωση αυτή θα εξετάσει τους χώρους ταφής της Ύστερης Γεωμετρικής / πρώιμης Αρχαϊκής εποχής στη Σπάρτη, όπου εμφανίζεται η μεταθανάτια λατρεία των νεκρών από την Αρχαϊκή στην Ελληνιστική Περίοδο. Θα επικεντρωθούμε στες θέσεις: στο «Ηρώον» κοντά στον ποταμό Ευρώτα, και στα οικοδομικά τετράγωνα 98 και 101 της σύγχρονης πόλης της Σπάρτης. Η λατρεία των νεκρών ως ηρώων μέσα στον οικισμό της Σπάρτης αντιπροσωπεύει μία τοπικοτοπική μορφή σεβασμού με ανθρωπομοετίκες προσφορές όμως αυτές προς τιμήν ηρώων όπως του Αγαμέμνονα και της Αλεξάνδρας-Κασσάνδρας στις Αμύκλες. Προτείνω, λοιπόν, ότι η εκ νέου ανακάλυψη των ταφών από την Αρχαϊκή περίοδο και εξής, συνέβαλε σε μία τοπική Σπαρτιατική ταυτότητα που εκφράστηκε μέσα από τη λατρεία «μικρότερων» ηρώων.

32 Leonidas Petrakis. A child’s remembrance of living through the Nazi atrocity against the ‘118 Spartans’ in autumn 1943
I remember the Germans bombing the retreat of British in 1941 and then entering Sparta on the main Tripolis-to-Sparta road, just two blocks from my home. Shame felt by the occupation, starvation, and deprivations culminated in the taking (with help from local collaborators) of over a hundred hostages in the autumn of 1943, and transporting them on open trucks; how the horrible news spread of the execution of 118 of them at Monodentri; seeing the blood-splattered bodies passing underneath my window on Hosios Nikon Street on their way to the cemetery; their burial directly across from my grandmother’s grave. I remember Sparta gripped by fear, when I spent a week during the summer of 1946 next to the Monodenti killing field where distant relatives kept their flocks; and fear of the junta in 1970 when I stopped at the neglected Monodenti monument to leave some flowers.

Οι αναμνήσεις ενός παιδιού που έζησε την ωμότητα των Ναζί κατά των '118 Σπαρτιατών' το φθινόπωρο του 1943

Θυμάμαι τους Γερμανούς να βομβαρδίζουν τους Βρετανούς ενώ οπισθοχωρούσαν το 1941 και μετά να εισέρχονται στη Σπάρτη από τον κεντρικό δρόμο Τρίπολης-Σπάρτης, μόλις δύο τετράγωνα από το σπίτι μου. Η ντροπή της Κατοχής, η πείνα και οι στερήσεις εφτάσαν στο αποκορύφωμά τους με τη σύλληψη -με τη βοήθεια ντοπίων δωσίλογων- πάνω από εκατό αιχμαλώτων το 1943. Θυμάμαι να τους μεταφέρουν σε ανυκτα φορτηγά. Να διαδιδόταν η θλίψη της εκτέλεσης 118 εξ αυτών στο Μονοδέντρι. Θυμάμαι να μεταφέρουν τα αιματοβαμμένα κορμιά κάτω από το παράθυρό μου στην οδό Οσίου Νίκωνος καθ' οδόν προς το νεκροταφείο. Θυμάμαι την ταφή τους ακριβώς απέναντι από το μνήμα της γιαγιάς μου. Θυμάμαι τη Σπάρτη τρομοκρατούμενη καθώς πέρασα μία εβδομάδα το καλοκαίρι του 1946 στο Μονοδέντρι δίπλα στο πεδίο εκτελέσεως, όπου μακρινοί συγγενείς είχαν τα κοπάδια τους. Και θυμάμαι το φόβο για τη χούντα το 1970 όταν σταμάτησα στο εγκαταλελειμένο μνημείο στο Μονοδέντρι για να αφήσω λουλούδια.

33  Angeliki Petropoulou. The Spartan royal funeral in comparative perspective

The paper examines the religious nature and political significance of the honours granted to Spartan kings on their death, which are then compared with similar Achaemenid practices. We argue that all customs concerning compulsory mourning are exceptions in the context of Classical Sparta, as are the ekphora and burial of a king’s image, a rite necessitated by the fact that Leonidas’ body had been left exposed on the battlefield, rather than being repatriated and buried in Sparta. We then show that, although parallels between Spartan and Achaemenid compulsory mourning exist, the differences between the two are more significant than the similarities.

Η σπαρτιατική βασιλική ταφή μέσω συγκριτικής προοπτικής

Προτείνω να συγκριθούν οι Σπαρτιατικές βασιλικές ταφές στα χωριά 6.58 του Ηροδότου, Λακ. 15.9 του Ξενοφώντα και Άγης. 40.3 του Πλουτάρχου με αντίστοιχες επιβεβαιωμένες πρακτικές που παρατηρούνται σε σχέση με ταφές Αχαιμενιδών και ομηρικών βασιλέων ή μελών της βασιλικής οικογένειας. Θα υποστηριχθεί ότι 1) η ανακήρυξη και επιβολή θρήνου για όλους τους υπηκόους του βασιλιά και η μεταφορά του σώματός του στην πατρική γη για ταφή ήταν σπαρτιατικές, περσικές και ομηρικές πρακτικές, και 2) οι Πέρσες είναι ανάμεσα στους ανώνυμους βαρβάρους της Ασίας που αναφέρει ο Ηρόδοτος ότι μοιράζονταν -μαζί με τους Σπαρτιάτες- το έθιμο του υποχρεωτικού θρήνου.

34  Eleni Psychogiou. Mycenaean and modern rituals of death and resurrection: comparative data based on a krater from Hagia Triada, Elis

The funeral representation on a Mycenaean krater from Palioboukovina in Elis contains certain obscure, ambiguous elements, which make its interpretation difficult. This paper attempts a new approach to the scene depicted, based on comparisons with modern magico-religious practices regarding death and resurrection, which form crucial stages of the symbolic cycle of time and vegetation. In conclusion it is suggested that the depiction on the krater may not be a funeral scene but the pictorial representation of some seasonal ritual of mourning for the death and rebirth of the god of vegetation, bed-fellow of the Great Mother-Goddess.

Τιμώντας τους μεταφυσικούς ’νεκρούς’: αρχαίες και σύγχρονες θρησκευτικές τελευταίες αναγέννησης με αφετηρία μια παράσταση σε μυκηναϊκό κρατήρα

Στα τέλη της δεκαετίας του 1990 αποκαλύφθηκε μυκηναϊκό νεκροταφείο στην Αγία Τριάδα του νομού Ηλείας, στη θέση «Παλιομπουκοβίνα». Στο δρόμο ενός από τους θαλαμωτούς τάφους βρέθηκε κεραμικό όστρακο με παράσταση πρόθεσης νεκρού και γυναικείου θρήνου, η αρχαιότερη στο είδος της μέχρι σήμερα. Κατά τους ανασκαφείς η παράσταση αφορά τη νεκρική τελετουργία για κάποιο μέλος της κοινότητας στην οποία ανήκε ο νεκροταφείο. Παρατηρώντας τις λεπτομέρειες της παράστασης και συγκρίνοντάς την με σύγχρονα ελληνικά λατρευτικά δρώμενα για «θνήσκουσες» χθόνιες θεότητες ή βλαστικές δαιμονικές μορφές, θα υποστηρίζω ότι πιθανόν και η μυκηναϊκή νεκρική παράσταση να μπορούσε να μην έχει κοσμικό αλλά θρησκευτικό χαρακτήρα.

35 James Roy. Anyte of Tegea and the other dead

The brief epigram in verse is found from the archaic period onwards, originally most often on inscriptions recording the dead on a tombstone or a dedication to a god. From the early Hellenistic period the use of the epigram was expanded to cover a much wider range of subjects. In this process of adaptation the sophisticated work of the Tegean poetess Anyte made a significant and original contribution, which included funerary epigrams for young unmarried women but extended also to epigrams for animals.

Η Ανύτη της Τεγέας και οι άλλοι νεκροί

Το σύντομο επίγραμμα σε στίχους που εμφανίζεται από την αρχαϊκή περίοδο και εξής, απαντά αρχικά συχνότερα σε επιγραφές επιτύμβιων στηλών ή προσφοράς σε θεότητα. Από την πρώιμη Ελληνιστική περίοδο η χρήση των επιγράμματος επεκτάθηκε ώστε να καλύπτει μεγαλύτερο εύρος θέματος. Σε αυτή τη διαδικασία αναπροσαρμογής, το εκλεπτυσμένο έργο της Τεγεάτισσας ποιήτριας Ανύτης απετέλεσε μία σημαντική και αυθεντική συνεισφορά, η οποία περιελάμβανε ταφικά επιγράμματα για νεαρές ανύπαντρες γυναίκες, ενώ επεκτάθηκε και σε επιγράμματα για ζώα.

36 Yanis Saitas. Cemeteries and settlements of Mani in medieval and later periods: a second contribution

This paper presents some aspects of an ongoing research documenting the network of settlements and the corresponding cemeteries in the peninsula of Mani. Examples dating from the middle ages are presented, but mainly post-Byzantine and modern cases are discussed. Regional distribution, inner organization and the evolution of the cemeteries over time are examined. The typology of the memorial structures of successive periods is documented. The correspondence with the local community, patrilocal lineages and the social status of the family of the dead is analyzed. The first contribution was presented in the International Conference “Sparta and Laconia from prehistory to pre-modern”, Sparta 17-20 March 2005.

Περιλαμβάνονται παραδείγματα από τους μέσους χρόνους, κυρίως ως από τους μεταβυζαντινούς και νεότερους χρόνους. Εξετάζονται ζητήματα της χωροταξικής τους κατανομής, της εσωτερικής τους οργάνωσης, της διαχρονικής τους εξέλιξης. Παρουσιάζονται στοιχεία σχετικά με την τυπολογία των ταφικών κατασκευών των διαφόρων περιόδων. Συσχετίζονται με τις αντίστοιχες τοπικές κοινότητες, τις πατροτοπικές ομάδες και την κοινωνική κατάταξη της οικογένειας των νεκρών. Η πρώτη σχετική ανακοίνωση είχε πραγματοποιηθεί στο Διεθνές Συνέδριο «Η Σπάρτη και η Λακωνία από τα προϊστορικά μέχρι τα νεότερα χρόνια», Σπάρτη 17-20 Μαρτίου 2005.

37 Nicholas Sekunda. IG V.1 1124. The dead of Geronthrai fallen at Mantinea

IG V.1 1124 from Geronthrai informs us that one Eualkes fell in the war at Mantinea. Since its first publication this inscription has been associated with the first battle of Mantinea in 418.
This causes problems as the perioikic contingents had not yet been incorporated into the Lakedaimonian army as a whole, and were absent from the battle. In this paper I shall propose that the inscription should be down-dated to 385, when the Lakedaimonian army, now incorporating the perioikoi, forcibly intervened to prevent the synoikism of Mantinea. Epigraphic parallels for the letter-forms will be offered.

IG. V.1 1124. Ο νεκρός των Γερονθρών στη Μαντίνεια
Η επιγραφή IG. V.1 1124 από τις Γερονθρές μας πληροφορεί πως κάποιος Ευάλκης έπεσε κατά τον πόλεμο στη Μαντίνεια. Από την πρώτη δημοσίευση η επιγραφή συσχετίσθηκε με την πρώτη μάχη της Μαντίνειας το 418. Ο συσχετισμός αυτός είναι προβληματικός καθώς τα στρατιωτικά τμήματα των περιοίκων δεν είχαν ακόμη εξ ολοκλήρου ενσωματωθεί στο στρατό των Λακεδαιμονίων, και απουσίαζαν από τη μάχη. Σε αυτή την ανακοίνωση εισηγούμαι πως η επιγραφή πρέπει να χρονολογηθεί στο 385 όταν ο στρατός των Λακεδαιμονίων, την εποχή που ενέταξε τους περιοίκους, παρενέβη δυναμικά με σκοπό να εμποδίσει τον συνοικισμό της Μαντίνειας. Θα παρατεθούν επιγραφικά παράλληλα για τη μορφή των γραμμάτων.

Based on my published ethnography on the Inner Mani, I will discuss the local way of “honouring the dead” and I will explore the implications of the model of antiphony in today’s society as well as in cultural studies.

39 Naya Sgouritsa. Remarks on the use of plaster in tholos tombs at Mycenae: hypotheses on the origin of the painted decoration of tombs in mainland Greece
The existing evidence indicates that plaster was originally used in the joints of the masonry of the dromos, façade and doorway of a few tholoi at Mycenae, especially in the constructions made of poros blocks, for the purpose of waterproofing. Besides the structural requirements, plaster was also used for decorative reasons. Tomb decoration, which is of several types, appears rarely. The plastered (simple or coloured) and frescoed LH tholoi and chamber tombs were located mainly in the Argolid and Boeotia. The decoration involved mostly the façade, sometimes the doorway and, in only a few cases, the chamber. This practise, though limited, could well have evolved as a special Helladic idea, arising from the need for ostentation and claim for status, as there are no Minoan prototypes. Undoubtedly, they belonged to the ruling class and the elite of the above regions.

Παρατηρήσεις για τη χρήση ασβεστοκονιάματος σε θολωτούς τάφους των Μυκηνών: υποθέσεις για την απαρχή της ταφικής διακόσμησης στην ηπειρωτική Ελλάδα
Από τις υπάρχουσες ενδείξεις προκύπτει ότι το ασβεστοκονίαμα χρησιμοποιείται αρχικά σε τάφους για την αδιαβροχοποίηση κατασκευών κυρίως από πωρόλιθους, όπως διαπιστώνεται στους θολωτούς τάφους της μεταίος ομάδας κατά Wace στις Μυκήνες Εν τουτόσημο, φαίνεται ότι παράλληλα εξυπηρετούσε και την αισθητική εικόνα τους. Η ταφική διακόσμηση οπωσδήποτε περιορισμένη, εντοπίζεται κυρίως στην Αρχαλίδα, ενώ τέτοια παραδείγματα ανευρίσκονται επίσης στη Βοιωτία. Η ιδέα της διακόσμησης αυτής, που εμφανίζει τρεις τύπους, φαίνεται ότι είναι ελλαδικής προέλευσης, καθώς δεν υπάρχουν, προς το παρόν, μινωικά πρότυπα, και αναμφίβολα προανέφτηκαν από την
40 Georgios Steiris. Exemplary deaths in the Peloponnese: Plutarch’s study of death and its revision by Georgius Trapezuntius Cretensis
This paper seeks first to explore the way Plutarch of Chaeronea (46-119 AD), the eminent historian and philosopher of Middle Platonism, discussed exemplary deaths in the Peloponnese in his Moralia. Plutarch’s references are indicative of his theory on death, which is based on Greek philosophy. Secondly, this paper aims to present the attempt by Georgius Trapezuntius Cretensis, the Greek scholar of the 15th century, to reinterpret Plutarch’s views about exemplary deaths in the Peloponnese.

41 Anthi Theodorou-Mavrommatidi. A composite pendant in an EH I burial at the Apollon Maleatas site in Epidauros: an attempt at a biography Accompanying the EH I burial of a young woman from the precinct of the sanctuary of Apollon Maleatas at Epidauros a necklace with a pendant was found. It is composed of an ovoid plaque of schist, fish teeth attached to its surface and two shell-fragments which framed the plaque on either side. This find raises a series of new research questions, from the most straightforward and practical, such as the use and source of the fish bones, and the technique of its construction, to the more complex, such as its significance as jewellery for the dead and its aesthetic value in the context of Early Helladic culture.

42 Erika Weiberg. The invisible dead. The case of the Argolid and Corinthia during the Early Bronze Age
The possibility of archaeologists finding the dead of any society is ultimately dependent on the way in which groups of people in different cultures and times chose to handle the dead of their communities. For the Argolid and Corinthia during the Early Bronze Age, the mortuary record is very limited. How are we to interpret our failure to locate these Early Helladic dead? This paper sets out to analyse this problem through a consideration of the existing material and comparative Early Helladic data in the search of the missing majority and the meaning of the present few.

43 Theodora Zampaki. The burial customs for Alexander the Great in Arabic historiography and the Alexander Romance

This paper aims at presenting a description and discussion of the burial customs as well as the ceremony of the funeral of Alexander the Great as presented in the ‘Universal histories’ of Arab historians and the surviving various versions of the Alexander Romance. The Arabic narratives as well as those of the Alexander Romance demonstrate that the preparation, laying out, mourning and lamenting, as well as the procession to the grave, are the main parts of the funeral rites of Alexander’s burial. On the whole, the narratives of the Arab historians reflect the infiltration of Greek ideas, beliefs and symbols into the world of the East. But it is characteristic that the Arab historians emphasize the ethical and moral elements of the various stories of Alexander’s death and burial.

Οι τελετές ταφής του Μεγάλου Αλεξάνδρου στην αραβική ιστοριογραφία και το Αλεξανδρινό Μυθιστόρημα

Στόχος της ανακοίνωσης είναι η περιγραφή και συζήτηση των ταφικών εθίμων καθώς και τη τελετή της ταφής του Μεγάλου Αλεξάνδρου όπως παρουσιάζονται στις «Παγκόσμιες Ιστορίες» των Αράβων ιστορικών της πρώιμης και μέσης περιόδου της αραβικής ιστοριογραφίας. Η αφίγηση των Αράβων ιστορικών συγκρίνεται με αυτή του ελληνικού Αλεξανδρινού Μυθιστορήματος και των μεταφράσεων του στα συριακά, αιθιοπικά και αρμένικα. Η τελετή για τον Αλέξανδρο συγκρίνεται επίσης με αυτή για τον Δαρείο Γ’ - μια τελετή που αναφέρεται πως οργάνωσε για τον Αλέξανδρο. Τα συμπεράσματα που εξάγονται από αυτή την ανάλυση έχουν την εθνογραφική και τα πολιτικά στοιχεία πίσω από τις περιγραφές των συγγραφέων που έχουν βρεθεί.
Preface

The Conference ‘Honouring the Dead in the Peloponnese’ took place in Sparta 23-25 April 2009. It reflected a wide range of recent academic research in the Arts and Humanities on public and private commemoration. It is with great pleasure that we acknowledge the bodies which contributed so generously to make the conference possible: first and foremost the mayor and council of the city of Sparti, who showed unstinting support and generous backing; the J. F. Costopoulos Foundation and the British Academy also provided generous support and other participating organisations were the Pnevmatiki Estia of the Dimos Spartis and the University of the Peloponnese. We wish to thank the Public Library of Sparti and Mrs Eleni Tzinieri-Tzannetakou and the University of the Peloponnese for generously placing their lecture halls at our disposal. We were particularly pleased that a number of exhibitions and other cultural events were timed to coincide with the conference: ‘Studies on Laconia’. Book exhibition organised by the Central Public Library of Sparti; ‘The Naval Battle of Navarino: Multiple Readings. The Antonis Tantoulos Collection’ presented by the National Gallery of Greece - Annex at Sparti and the General National Archives for the Prefecture of Lakonia; ‘In Memory of Pericles Panteleakis’ art exhibition organised by the Pnevmatiki Estia of Sparti; ‘Heroes of my Town’ competition open to the primary school pupils of Sparti. Particular thanks are due to the individuals who helped organise the Conference, Dr Chrysanthi Gallou and Dr Metaxia Papapostolou.

Following some popular media productions, the theme ‘Honouring the Dead’ has significant current reverberations in popular culture, especially in Greece. Purposely held in Sparta, the focal point of recent public attention, this conference sought to exploit such exceptional current interest as a starting-point for a more broad-ranging exploration of the theme across the Peloponnese from prehistory to the 21st century. The human responses to death and burial are highly-charged with emotion and yet also formalised and bound by convention. From the Iliad onwards these tensions have struck a note in Greek life, art and literature: the lament, the memorial and the iconography of death, the address over those killed in war, hero cult and the cult of relics, war monuments and literature.

Consequently, the aim of the conference was to bring together experts from a variety of disciplines (Classicists, Byzantinists, ancient and modern historians, ethnographers, archaeologists, art historians and social historians) to discuss a number of aspects where the combination of their different contributions might open up new vistas.

The conference was focused on Sparta and the Peloponnese to reflect the interests of the Centre for Spartan and Peloponnesian Studies, but also because that area offers a wealth of relevant material, varying greatly in nature and extending over the chronological span of the conference, from prehistory to the present, and thus allowed a range of different forms of analysis. Our vision in organising the conference was of a perspective that brought together in a single collage the insights of different disciplines across different times, in the hope that each image would reflect on and give new meaning to the others. The opportunity of publishing these papers allows us not only to present this picture to a wide readership, but also to achieve conjunctions and reflections which were not possible under the constraints of conference organisation.

In this preface we hope to draw out the connections implicit in the different papers. A simple review of the volume will immediately bring to mind the thematic interrelationships which formed part of the structure of the original conference.

Heroization, Politics and Heroic Death ranges from the Bronze Age to the Late Byzantine period. The term ‘hero’ can convey slightly different things, but touches on the semi-divine, ancestors of a legendary past, doers of great deeds as well as having the modern connotations of courage and daring. The prominence of heroes and their symbolic power can be traced through the creation and manipulation of cultural icon, national ideal and political emblem. Banou and Hitchcock explore this phenomenon through the ‘Lord of Vapheio’ on the basis of the spectacular funerary gifts which mark the identity of the dynasty buried in the tomb as closely linked with Minoan Crete. Konstantintidi-Syvridi and Paschalidis take a long perspective in viewing the cult of the dead and hero worship at Mycenae, underlining the landscape setting and how eloquently it spoke to visitors in the Classical and Hellenistic periods of an heroic past. Pavlides explores the worship of the dead as heroes within the settlement of Sparta, representing a local phenomenon closely bound up with the creation of communal identity in the Archaic polis. Burton also reflects on the relationship between divinity, the gods of the underworld and hero cult. The rediscovery of burials from the Archaic period onwards contributed to a local, Spartan identity expressed through the worship of “lesser” heroes. The contrasting histories of tomb and hero cult in Sparta versus Messenia (initially subject to but then liberated from Spartan domination) nicely juxtapose cases of the invention of both ‘official’ and purely local, small scale worship. Marantou takes up the theme of hero cult with an Arcadian emphasis and through Pausanias’s image of the past.

Other papers focus more closely on the Classical period, the celebration of the heroic dead. How typical were the Spartans in their reactions to mortality? Were their attitudes to death and their burial customs really as ‘other’, if not unique, as Xenophon, Plutarch - and 'The 300’ - make them out to be? Paradiso, Gengler and Petropoulou analyse closely the sources and the presentation of exemplary death in Sparta. Again identity and self-image are pictured in investigations of the insiders’ and outsiders’ views. Spartan royal funerals were exceptionally extravagant, their conduct uniquely embedded in Spartan tradition. The war dead were also commemorated exceptionally in Sparta. The 300 heroes of Thermopylae have been invented and reinvented time and again. Paradiso looks to Herodotus, who was fascinated by their celebrity and conducted his own ἱστορίη into their names and actions. Gengler places the festival of the Leonidea in the broader context of the transformation of Spartan traditions during the Imperial period and in relation to the image of Spartan history in the literature of that time. The war dead of Perioikic Geronthrai form the theme of Sekunda’s paper, while honourable death as perhaps seen through the distorting glass of Roman revisionism is the theme of Papapostolou’s article. Seneca’s version of Agamemnon’s death, as reported by Paraskeviotis, also reveals subtle changes of emphasis from Classical Greek to Roman Imperial perceptions. Later still, as Steiris explains, Plutarch’s treatment of exemplary deaths in the Moralia, was interpreted and reinterpreted in the light of Middle Platonism, and later Greek thought as exemplified in the writings of Georgios Trapezuntius and Gemistos Plethon. Zampaki illustrates how traditions in the Arab historians about the funeral of Alexander the Great relay on the one hand the narrative of events, but on the other put an emphasis on the ethical and moral lessons.
If in a negative way, the deliberate slighting of the dead is an acknowledgement of their power - the archaeological evidence for this treatment in late Mycenaean Achaia is assembled by Papazoglou-Manioudaki. The emotive impact of one such atrocity in a much more modern context is narrated by Petrakis.

Lament and Threnody. The moiroloia, the extemporised Maniot laments of S Greece, are a classic archetype of the dirge. Seremetakis sets the scene for this section, with Antiphony, Ritual and the Construction of Truth examining the presentation of the individual and the setting of the lament within the overall structure of the ritual. Katsoulakos, father and son, then make their portrayal all the more vivid thanks to their unrivalled archive of examples of moiroloia, picking out, in particular, the historical and political context, on the one hand, and the kin relationship between deceased and singer on the other. Psychogiou takes the remarkable find of vase scenes depicting lamentation of the dead which have recently been recovered from Mycenaean tombs in Elis, to bridge the gap between remote past and present by confronting the similarities in the representation of ritual in past and present. The laying out of the corpse (prothesis) is treated by Fragkopoulou in the unexpected context of votives at Lakedaimonian sanctuaries. These popular themes are confronted with poetry of a more consciously literary conceit: Roy sketches poems by the Hellenistic poetess Anyte of Tegea including not only funerary epigrams for young maidens but extending also to the commemoration of animals. Kakourou-Chroni turns to the modern poet Nikiforos Vrettakos, tracing the development of his reflections on death from an early phase where he is ‘immersed in death’ to his late poetry transformed by his experiences of World War II where ‘death murders God’ but also ‘shines on the suffering world’.

The papers contemplating Memorials, Monumentality and Memory range from the prehistoric through historic periods to modern monuments. Marabea revisits the great tholos tomb at Kambos, close to the Laconian-Messenian border, a newly monumentalised tomb type of the early Mycenaean period. Papadimitriou considers a similar early part of the Mycenaean period, but with an emphasis on the symbolism of entrances in the passage from life to death. Sgouritsa also follows up the symbolism of the entrance and threshold rituals expressed materially in the architecture of the great Mycenaean tombs. Kokorou-Alevra turns to the Archaic period and funerary statuary in the Peloponnese, pointing to a major fault-line in the memorialisation of the dead between the city states of the NE Peloponnese and the rest of the region. She interprets the contrast as one grounded in the ideology of the Spartan state. Karapanagiotou and Koursoumis investigate anew the curious ‘menhir’ from Levidi in Arkadia, perhaps erected to mark the empty tomb of a king struck dead for his hubris.

The final theme of the conference looked to Burial, Identity and Representation, that is to say the commemoration (not to say reinvention) of those who have died, through material culture and iconography. The remote prehistory of this deeply human impulse is explored by Georgiadis in his review of fragmentary patterns recorded in the Mesolithic and Neolithic Peloponnese. Kossyva’s account of the Early Bronze Age cemetery at Delpriza, in the Argolid, adds precious new evidence to the recent flurry of new discoveries from the period; still, however, EBA burials are not well attested in the NE Peloponnese, a paradox explored by Weinberg. Fox uses the vessels from the heroic Grave Circles at Mycenae to conjure an image of feasting and drinking, which is then analysed to understand the status of feasting and socio-political fluidity in the period; looking to the same time and context Mathioudaki takes a different theoretical perspective of aesthetics and object biographies to consider the Early Mycenaean pictorial vases. Drakaki extends the analysis by exploring the seals accompanying high-status female burials of the Mycenaean epoch and Kalogeropoulos examines the symbolic power of the iconography of Palatial Style amphoras of the early Mycenaean period.
Tomb form and social message is the focus of the publication by Lambropoulos, Moutzouridis and Nikolentzos of two recently-excavated cemeteries in Elis. Moschos illustrates the other end of the Mycenaean epoch by examining social status and burial practices during its final period after the collapse of the palaces; in a radically transformed social and political world, the imagery and material expression used in the past is still exploited, but exploited to tell a very different story. The interplay of communal, ethnic and even linguistic identity with ritual practice lies at the heart of Luce’s analysis of Early Iron Age grave types.

Dimakis takes the analysis later still in his review of individual and collective identity in Argos of the Classical and Hellenistic periods. Grigorakakis presents new cemetery evidence from the highly contested territory of the Thyreatis. Fritzilas looks to grave stelai of Hellenistic and Roman date from Arkadia, and how they attempt to commemorate and preserve the memory of the dead. Reinvented tradition and the concrete memorialisation of the family make for a fascinating counterpoint in the papers of Gavala and Saitas on recent historical monuments. Another aspect of the presentation of the dead is the use of jewellery to sculpt the body, this is explored by Theodorou-Mavromatidi for the Early Bronze Age and Louka for the Archaic period.

The argument which develops through this rich variety of illustration in no way underplays the strong emotion evoked by death – indeed this precisely gives the ritual and the symbolism their power, even though they are formalized and pressed into moulds of social and political conformity. In the papers that follow, we note the play and counterplay of political manipulation, the idealization of the dead and its use to model civic and moral virtue, the importance of ancestors and ancestry as symbols of identity and belonging, as well as display and conspicuous consumption and its dialectic between the community and the (family) group.

The range of different approaches and of different types of material does not allow any single theoretical viewpoint to dominate the contributions. Instead we have a mosaic of studies exploring in different ways how death was memorialised, and how the process reflected social aspirations of those who created the memorials, or sought to exploit the management of death for social or political purposes. Though all are drawn from the relatively limited area of the Peloponnese, the wealth of material offered by the Peloponnese means that the volume illustrates the issues currently being addressed in the study of death and the dead in the Greek world.

MESOLITHIC AND NEOLITHIC BURIALS IN THE PELOPONNESE

MERCOURIOS GEORGIADIS

INTRODUCTION

The Mesolithic and Neolithic burials in Greece have received little attention over the years. This is due to the limited number of known cemeteries and burials from two periods that last almost six millennia. For the Mesolithic period the rather limited examples enabled, until recently, arbitrary parallels from far away regions that cannot be assessed or understood in the Aegean context. Today, more data are available from the Aegean providing a clearer picture, which will be presented and discussed. Furthermore, the most substantial Neolithic cemeteries have been recovered in the region with the most dense settlement pattern during the Neolithic era, Thessaly. Hence, the discussions related to burials have been more concentrated in northern Greece rather than in the south. The accumulation of more evidence from the Peloponnese permits a diachronic assessment of this region and an understanding of burial practices. For that reason the cemeteries of the Peloponnese will be presented and will be analysed according to each phase. The aim is to understand the practices and the belief of each cemetery and its relation to contemporary ones in the Peloponnese and the wider Aegean. Broader issues like the burial practices and the relationship of the living and the dead as well as the cemeteries with settlements will be raised. This last issue has been a central question for scholars since it allows comparisons with contemporary regions in the Balkans and the Near East.¹

Cemeteries

This presentation will start with the site which has the earliest and most numerous burials in the Peloponnese, the Franchthi cave, and will follow an anti-clockwise geographical order for the rest (MAP 1).

MAP 1. The Mesolithic and Neolithic Peloponnese.

The Franchthi cave was occupied from Upper Paleolithic times, but during the Mesolithic period the first burials were deposited within the cave (MAP 1.1). There were at least 28 individuals representing all Mesolithic phases, c. 1500 years, from the transition from Upper Paleolithic to Mesolithic until the Final
Mesolithic and Neolithic burials

Mesolithic period. There were several individuals of all ages found in bone scatters all over the Mesolithic strata of the cave. The same treatment can also be seen in one contemporary case at ‘Cyclops’ cave’ in the Northern Sporades. Primary inhumations have also been recovered like that of a young male (25–29 years old) in a shallow pit. He was placed in a semi-contracted position with hands crossed on his chest, and he was covered by small stones. Two shells, a land snail and a marine snail, were possibly placed along with the young male, while next to the deceased charcoal remains may be related to him. A parallel treatment of the deceased has been attested at the contemporary primary inhumation of a female at Theopetra cave in Thessaly, and at several burials of males, females and infants from Maroula on Kythnos. At the latter site in grave 6 the deceased was covered by a large stone not unlike the practice at the Franchthi cave, finding parallels at contemporary cemeteries in Palestine. Five more Lower Mesolithic inhumations come from the Franchthi cave, three adult females, one adult male and one infant. They were partly preserved close to each other, indicating that they were also placed in semi-contracted positions. One further infant burial from the Upper Mesolithic stratum may have been a primary inhumation, close to which shells and charcoal remains have pointed to similarities to Lower Mesolithic practices. Nevertheless, the most astonishing burial practice during the Mesolithic era was the presence of cremations. Two individuals were definitely cremated at the Franchthi cave, which represented the earliest occurrence of this burial tradition in Greece.

During the EN–MN early period most of the burials within the cave belonged to infants and children up to 8 years old. They are mainly inhumations in pits placed in contracted positions. Some of the children were covered by stone slabs or heaps of stones, while one of the children had a stone ‘pillow’ below its head. In this phase a new cluster of burials was formed at Paralia, a few metres north-west of the cave, where adult inhumations were found in contracted positions. This area was also used as a habitation area where the burials were incorporated within the living area. The same burial tradition is recovered in the MN burials within the cave and at the Paralia. An infant MN burial was accompanied by a monochrome jar deliberately broken in two and a small marble bowl, and a female adult burial at Paralia had many offerings such as a monochrome Urfirnis vase, 6 bone points and 4 obsidian tools. In the FN phase burials were recovered only at Paralia, representing exclusively inhumations that belong primarily to females, a few males and a few children. The female burials were accompanied by offerings, whilst one grave contained an elder female and a younger male. Although Paralia remained a habitation area and the burials were within it, a wall may have segregated the living from the dead.

Aria had been used during the LN and FN phases. It was an open-air site, located on a low hill close to the modern village, c. 2 km east of Nauplion (MAP 1.2). Within the LN strata of the settlement, there was an oval cutting made for the pit grave, which was marked by a partly preserved stone circle. In the grave there was an inhumation of a child aged up to 4 years, with two vessels placed near its legs, providing us with a FN date for the burial.

In the area of Koutsouria in Nauplion a natural cavity of the rocks was used as a burial ground (MAP 1.3), which was covered by large stones carefully placed. An inhumation of a male in a crouched position was recovered with a few early EH and Neolithic offerings, but the burial most probably belonged to the FN period.

At Prosymna there was most probably a small cave (MAP 1.4), where humans were deposited. The human bones and skulls were recovered in a scattered state and could be dated to the MN period. At the bottom of this cave there were six small depressions: two of them contained nothing but earth and stones and one had a few stone beads. Depression no. 4 contained remains of a cremated child covered by a heap of stones; in depression no. 5 bones of a cremated adult were found accompanied by an obsidian blade, a fragment of a stone bead and two monochrome sherds, all covered by a heap of stones. At depression no. 6 a single long bone was attested broken into three pieces. Blegen concluded that the burials represented the remains of cremations practiced in this small cave. Similar cremations in pits have been found at EN Soufli Magoula, LN Platia Magoula Zarkou and LN Dimini, all in Thessaly.21

At Lerna the burials were found in the open air site of the Neolithic and EH periods (MAP 1.5), extra mural, but very close to the habitation area.22 There were 9 MN burials, most of which can be dated to an early phase, which belonged to four infants, three children up to 10 years old and two adults.23 One of the infants was placed within an Urfinnis painted bowl, but all infant and child burials were placed in shallow pits or covered by low earth or stone mounds. However, there is a differentiation between infants and children because two out of three of the latter received offerings, namely cups.24 The two adult burials are represented only by forearm and hand bones belonging to a male and a female. They both seem to be closely related to the infant and child burials perhaps suggesting a kind of companionship.25 The two FN burials belonged to adult females in their 20s placed within pit graves, one of which was lined with stones, while both were possibly covered by low earth or stone mounds.26 At burial JC–1 the female was in a crouched position with one vessel as an offering as well as sherds of others and several obsidian blades. The female at burial HTN-1 was placed extended with the hands on the stomach and the breast, and it was accompanied by two pots.

At Tsoungiza in Nemea a small collapsed cave has also been recovered nearby or within the Neolithic settlement (MAP 1.6). Along with the debris of the settlement a number of animal as well as human bones were recognized.27 The human bones included part of a skull, arm, femur, jaw and pelvis, representing at least two individuals. It seems that both the settlement remains and the content of the small cave can be dated to the MN period, bearing resemblances to the use of the contemporary small cave at Prosymna.

The Limnes cave is situated close to Kastria in the Kalavryta area on the border between Achaea and Arcadia (MAP 1.7). In the LN strata of its occupation several scattered human bones have been collected.28 They belonged to at least 15 individuals, from which nine were definitely or possibly males and the rest of uncertain gender.29 From the nine cases in which the age could be determined, seven appeared to be adult, one a teenager close to adulthood and a child 6 to 8 years old. There was only one in situ male inhumation, 35 years old, recovered in a grave lined with stones and a few large clay pieces at one end of the cave.\(^{30}\) It remains unclear whether the layer of earth and stones above the burial was a kind of mound or not. The deceased was placed in an extended position without any offering; however bone parts from two more individuals were found within the grave.\(^{31}\)

Ayioryitika was an open-air Neolithic settlement in the Tripolis plateau in south-east Arcadia (MAP 1.8). At this site two graves were recovered, either pits or cists, in which disarticulated bones were found.\(^{32}\) Grave I was dug under the floor of a building, where leg and arm bones were discovered of one or more individuals, along with a few sherds, two flaked stone blades (one chert and one obsidian), fragments of 3 or 4 stone pounders, a part of a saddle quern and animal bones.\(^{33}\) Grave II was located close to but outside the building area in which numerous bones and a skull were recovered belonging to a male 30–35 years old.\(^{34}\) The bones seemed to represent at least two individuals, while a stone axe was found in the fill above the grave. Grave I appeared to belong to the MN period, while Grave II was most probably of the same date.\(^{35}\)

The Kouveleiki caves A and B are located in the eastern part of Laconia on the Parnon mountain range (MAP 1.9). Within the cave LN and FN strata have been recovered, with many disarticulated bones reported throughout the excavated area.\(^{36}\) However, in one case in cave B part of a burial was found in situ and the rest was disarticulated by natural or human intervention.\(^{37}\) There was another burial in cave B found in situ belonging to the FN phase, situated in a shallow pit with a small heap of stones demarcating the position of the head.\(^{38}\) Moreover, an infant burial was attested placed within a vessel in cave A, similar to the one found at Aria, where it was placed inside a larger vessel and closed by a flat stone.\(^{39}\) This burial appears to belong to the FN phase rather than the LN period, while a similar pot burial comes from LN Rachmani\textsuperscript{40}, LN Soufli Magoula\textsuperscript{41} and FN Kefala.\textsuperscript{42}

The Alepotrypa cave is situated in the western coastal part of the Mani peninsula (MAP 1.10), and was used during the LN and FN periods,\textsuperscript{43} though Fowler\textsuperscript{44} has dated it to the FN period. In this cave there are different types of burials that were practiced during its use. Ossuary I was found in the first chamber of the cave and contained many disarticulated human bones; along with them a few sherds were attested, probably intrusive, two skulls of dogs and a mandible of a cow or donkey.\textsuperscript{45} Some of the bones and one of the skulls were outlined by stones, while at the northern part of this ossuary a primary inhumation of a child had been placed on a layer of stones. Under this inhumation another child burial was recovered, also placed on a layer of stones, whose bones were disarticulated. Below that, on the natural rock of the cave, a small mass of bones was found belonging to infant twins. In ossuary II fire remains and bases of large vessels one on top of the other were recovered, along with 14 skulls and many cranial and postcranial bones.\textsuperscript{46} The skulls were placed in an upright position without their jaws, while some were surrounded by circles of stones and one was placed on the base of a broken jar.\textsuperscript{47} There has been the suggestion that this ossuary represented a single event related to a final disposal burial stage.\textsuperscript{48} Ossuary I appeared to be earlier in date than ossuary II, according to the excavator.\textsuperscript{49} Nonetheless, there are primary inhumations, both within pits without any offerings, one belonging to an adult female, 27 years old, placed in a contracted position next to a hearth.\textsuperscript{50} There was also a pit that contained multiple primary inhumations of six to ten adults and adolescents.\textsuperscript{51} Two of them were found in situ, one in a contracted, the other in an extended position, but many had their limbs in situ and the rest of their bones disarticulated. No offerings were recovered apart from a few sherds, most probably intrusive, while there was a pit one metre away which contained the skeleton of a sheep or goat without its skull and limbs. Finally, there were two cases of cremated child burials placed in a niche in the deepest part of the cave. They both contained shell beads and were covered by large amounts of pottery sherds. From the adult group whose gender could be determined, 17 were males (or probably males), and 15 were females (or probably females). Overall, from 161 individuals, 81 were adults and 80 were below 18 years old. The finds did not provide a definite date for the burials, which most probably represented all phases of the cave’s occupation.

DISCUSSION

Franchthi had set the pace already in the Mesolithic period for the burial practices that would dominate during the Neolithic phases. The coexistence of habitation area and cemetery within a cave followed the Palaeolithic tradition already attested at the caves of Apidima, Kitsos and Theopetra. Primary inhumations, cremations and scattered bones were the main types that appeared in the Franchthi cave during the Mesolithic period. The discovery of scattered bones has caused considerable problems, since they rarely provide a definite answer as to whether they were intentionally dispersed or not. This issue prevented us from being clear about the practice of secondary burials, at least in the early phases under review. In the Mesolithic, burials of both sexes and all age groups are represented. The contemporary examples from the Aegean provide a picture similar to the one outlined by Franchthi, with the exception of the cremation found in it, which remains the earliest in Greece.

During the EN period Franchthi remained the only available cemetery in the Peloponnese and followed the burial tradition of the previous phase. In this period there was definite evidence of the practice of secondary burial at Prodromos in Thessaly, so some of the burials at Franchthi could have belonged to this type too. Nonetheless, cremations were no longer practiced at this site (something that would continue until the end of the Neolithic period) and a new burial cluster was used outside the cave at the same time. In fact this cluster suggested a kind of segregation since mainly children and infants were buried within the cave, while at Paralia only adults are found. The use of two burial clusters, one in the cave and one in the open air, has found parallels in a much later context at FN Tharrounia in Euboia, with a similar spatial arrangement, but with different burial practices.

MN Franchthi was similar to the previous phase, but some of the burials were now accompanied by offerings. During this phase small caves were used exclusively as burial grounds, as in the case of Prosymna and possibly in the case of Tsoungiza. The first was located at a distance from the contemporary settlement, clearly arguing for a separation between the living and the dead. Moreover, scattered bones were found inside pits suggesting more forcefully the second burial hypothesis. At the same time there was positive evidence of cremation being practiced within the cave, whilst a few burial offerings were attested. At Tsoungiza, where only scattered bones have been found, it has remained unclear how close the cave was to the settlement - possibly adjacent to it or inside it. At Lerna the graves were also very close to the settlement but extra mural, and they represented inhumations of children and infants. An age differentiation can be seen between the two groups, with the older group receiving offerings. The remains of two adults argue for the practice of secondary burial, closely associated with the child graves. At Ayioryitika we have had the only definite example of intra mural burial within an open-air settlement in the Peloponnese. Two parallels are found, one in a contemporary context at Chaironeia in Boiotia and one at LN Elateia in Fthiotis. Moreover, both graves at Ayioryitika contained secondary burials of one or more individuals from which only one male was recognized, with one of the burials containing a number of offerings.

Interestingly enough, during the LN phase we found limited evidence of cemeteries being active. The Limnes cave is better preserved with many bone scatters recovered from a number of areas of the cave, belonging primarily to adult males and very few to children. A single inhumation was found in a pit lined with stones, more like a cist grave, along with definite evidence of secondary burials. The practice of secondary burial has also been substantiated in this phase by the human remains found at the Kalythies cave on Rhodes. At Kouveleiki Cave A some of the bone scatters may have belonged to this phase also. At the Alepotrypa cave the burials cannot be dated since no offerings have been found and the cave was used during the LN and FN times. There are primary burials, multiple primary burials, secondary burials with special emphasis on the skulls, and cremations were recovered within the cave. The last type argues for continuity of this burial practice into the later phase of the Neolithic era. Adults and children are represented equally and the same applies for both genders.

In the FN period more cemeteries were active, the Alepotrypa cave being one of them. The double inhumation at Franchthi was similar, in a way, to the multiple inhumations recovered at the Alepotrypa cave. The cases of the caves at Aria and Kouveleiki argued for the presence of burials within the habitation area, while Koutsouria and Lerna argued for the opposite. Lerna was closer to the example of Paralia, i.e. the burials were very close or adjacent to the settlement, but not within it. The same can be seen in the contemporary example of Kefala on Keos and possibly of Yali.\footnote{Coleman 1977; Sampson 1988.} At both Aria and Kouveleiki Cave A there was a burial of a child inside a pot, which has found a contemporary parallel at Kefala.\footnote{Angel 1977, 134; Coleman 1977, 48.} At Lerna and Paralia there was clearly a better representation of female adults over males, something that was less clear at Kefala\footnote{Angel 1977, 135.} and Tharrounia.\footnote{Sampson 1993, 233–40.} At these four Peloponnesian sites (Koutsouria being somewhat unclear), most inhumations of adults and children were accompanied by burial offerings, which seems to have become a broader tendency during this phase. It is worth mentioning that burial gifts were uncommon at Kefala,\footnote{Coleman 1977, 51, table 4.} Tharrounia\footnote{Fowler 2004, 83, table 5.3.} and Yali.\footnote{Coleman 1977, 50–51.} Koutsouria has followed the MN tradition attested at Prosymna and Tsoungiza, where small caves were used exclusively for burials. At the same time, at the Alepotrypa and Kouveleiki caves the older tradition of cave use as habitation and burial area continued as well. During the FN period primary inhumations appeared to be commoner, attested in all known Peloponnesian contexts, although at Alepotrypa secondary burials were also practised. The same can be seen in contemporary cemeteries outside the Peloponnese such as Kefala, but secondary burials may have been practiced as well,\footnote{Sampson 1988.} and the same can be argued possibly for Yali.\footnote{Sampson 1988.} The case at FN Tharrounia was different since the secondary treatment is the main burial disposal method at this site both in the cave and in the open-air cluster.

In southern Greece, and particularly in the Peloponnese, there is a large number of natural caves due to the geological formation of this region. It has not been surprising that seven out of ten well-known Mesolithic–Neolithic cemeteries from the Peloponnese were caves, though research bias may partly have caused this. Caves were used as habitation areas on a permanent and semi–permanent basis as well as burial grounds from the Palaeolithic times until the end of the Neolithic period. This suggests a coexistence of the living with the dead within the same context, as happened at the caves of Mesolithic–MN Franchthi, LN

Limnes, LN–FN Kouveleiki and LN–FN Alepotrypa. Interestingly enough, this trend was altered in some cases, in the sense that small caves were chosen and used exclusively as burials grounds, separating the living from the dead. This phenomenon is so far unique to the Peloponnese and started as early as the MN period at Prosymna and most probably Tsoungiza, as well as at FN Koutsouria, running in parallel with the aforementioned caves. The reasons for this new tradition could be practical (i.e. a small natural cave close to the settlement could easily be employed as a burial ground), or symbolic (i.e. still bearing the symbolic significance relating to death attributed to the caves where habitations and burials coexisted). Perhaps the FN chamber tomb at the Athenian Agora,68 a built cave, is but a variation of this idea which became more popular in EBA times and thereafter.

The first open-air cemeteries appeared already in the EN period in Thessaly and at Paralia in Franchthi, but the latter is closely related to the burials in the cave and it is within the EN and MN habitation area. In that respect the notion of coexistence between living and dead has not changed, as argued for several Neolithic sites in Central and Northern Greece.69 At both MN sites, Lerna and Ayioryitika, the graves appear to be also part of the settlement; in the latter they were located underneath a house, as attested in contemporary Central Greece. This picture appears to change in the FN period, when Lerna and Paralia were differentiated by the habitation area, although they were located very close to it. The same might be true for Aria, but the published data are unclear regarding the relation of the burial to FN strata. The separation of the living from the dead can be clearly demonstrated only in the FN phase at the open-air sites. The same trend can be seen from the MN period in Northern Greece for both adult and child burials.70

The presence of two burial clusters close to each other serving the same community can be seen in the example of Franchthi. There was one cluster within the cave and one outside, at Paralia, both used during the EN and MN phases, with a known parallel at FN Tharrounia in Euboia.71 An even rarer case appears to be the use of two caves, located 50 m apart, in the area of Kouveleiki, as habitation and burial grounds in the FN phase, if not earlier.

All gender and age groups appear to be represented in the Mesolithic burials at the Franchthi cave. However, at EN–MN Franchthi and MN Lerna more children were buried than adults, whilst at the caves of MN Prosymna, MN Tsoungiza and MN Ayioryitika there seem to be more burials of adults than children. The latter pattern dominated in almost all the cemeteries during the LN and FN phases, perhaps with the exception of Aria and Alepotrypa caves, where a more balanced picture is attested. Nonetheless, at Aria this impression arose only from the single burial which has been recovered.

Another trend from the EN to the LN period in all the cemeteries was that only a few offerings were deposited in very few graves. In the FN phase offerings continued to be very few, but they are found in more graves than ever before (with the exception of the Alepotrypa and Kouveleiki caves, where few or no offerings were deposited). This tendency should not be explained by poverty: after all, the MN pottery in the settlements of the Peloponnese is of fine quality and great quantity, while the wares of the FN are far less decorative and with a larger proportion used for storage. Burial offerings are associated with afterlife beliefs, which became more significant in the Peloponnese from the FN period onwards. Perhaps the increase of storage vessels, the accumulation of goods seen in the settlements and the new ceramic repertoire of this phase marked the social conditions that led to more offerings deposited in the graves. Nonetheless, some limited social distinction may be already visible from the MN period onwards, based on the combination of burial practices, the grave construction and the offerings.72 The preservation of a heap of stones above the head of the deceased at Kouveleiki Cave B revealed that at least some graves were marked out. The frequent presence of obsidian tools as burial gifts is attested in the Peloponnese at MN Franchthi, MN Prosymna, MN Ayioryitika (along with chert) and FN Lerna, suggesting a pre-existing similar tradition to the one outlined by the richer evidence of EBA graves from southern mainland Greece, the Cyclades and Crete.73

There was also a variety of ways of disposing of the deceased irrespective of context74 (i.e. cave or open-air site) and symbolisms and meanings attributed to the burials. Inhumations appear to be a common practice and primary ones are found from the Mesolithic to the FN period. In fact by this last phase inhumation was the main disposal method in all the cemeteries, with the possible exception of the Alepotrypa cave. This seems to be a genuine practice of the period and it cannot be claimed that the reason why it dominates is because of reasons of preservation. Inhumation burial in an urn is a practice attested so far only for children in one case, at FN Kouveleiki Cave A. Multiple burials are attested already from the LN Limnes cave (a combination of primary and secondary ones), from LN–FN Alepotrypa and FN Franchthi. This practice has also found parallels beyond the Peloponnese, at EN Soufli Magoula, EN Nea Nikomedia, MN Chaironeia and FN Kefala. Most inhumations were placed in a contracted position without any particular orientation and only in a few instances were they laid extended. Inhumations were in some cases placed on pebble floors like at the LN–FN Alepotrypa cave, with a few parallels found at FN Kefala. As mentioned above, bone scatters within caves were very difficult to interpret, since they can be the result of human intervention (whether or not related to burial practices, for example cleaning), or even natural events such as flooding and cave collapse. More definite evidence of the practice of secondary burial in Neolithic contexts came from some remains in the depressions at MN Prosymna, the graves of MN Ayioryitika and the adult arm bones from MN Lerna. The same can be inferred from the bones found at the LN Limnes cave alongside the primary inhumation, as well as from two child burials in ossuary I at the LN–FN Alepotrypa cave. Definite evidence of secondary treatment outside the Peloponnese is known from the LN Kalythies cave and FN Tharrounia. The remains at ossuary II in the LN–FN Alepotrypa cave could be interpreted as a secondary burial with emphasis on skulls, as at EN Prodromos in Thessaly. In this case an ancestral cult could be surmised to have taken place, which could be associated with the presence of burials beneath the house floors and other funerary practices. Cremations appeared in the Peloponnese already from Mesolithic times at Franchthi, and were reserved only for adults. Cremation is also found at MN Prosymna in the case of both an adult and a child, whilst at the LN–FN Alepotrypa cave it was reserved only for some children. Cremations were practiced in two cemeteries in Thessaly, EN Soufli Magoula, where all ages were represented, and LN Platia Magoula Zarkou, where mainly adults were attested with a few children. The hiatuses in the practice of cremations in the Peloponnese and Thessaly during the Neolithic phases should be regarded as a result of the limited number of excavated cemeteries and graves rather than any other reason.

It is clear that in the Peloponnese there was a variety of burial practices that coexisted not only chronologically, but also in the same local context. The Peloponnese did not act as a unified region in the burial traditions since its geography formed areas with limited interaction. Nonetheless, there were certain regional phenomena, such as the practice of cremation and the segregation of the living from the dead. The latter was achieved either by using small caves as burial grounds or by separating the burial cluster from the nearby living area. There were also the limited offerings placed in tombs during the early Neolithic phases, a practice which changed during the FN period in almost all the cemeteries. Moreover, there are regional characteristics from neighbouring areas which were not found in the Peloponnese, such as the built graves recovered at FN Kefala and FN Tharrounia. This seems to be a particular practice attested so far only in the FN Attica-Kefala cultural region.

Furthermore, the question remains open regarding the location where the dead were disposed of, in large excavated Neolithic settlements in Greece and the Peloponnese in particular, such as EN–FN Corinth and MN–FN Koufouvouno. Perlès believed that the majority of people were buried outside the settlement from the EN period onwards in Greece. This hypothesis produced a unified picture for burial beliefs in Greece and set it apart from contemporary practices in the Balkans and the Near East. However, under scrutiny, a more varied picture appeared, with the Peloponnese as a very good example, where different practices coexisted in contemporary sites.

As more finds have come to light within the Peloponnese itself, one could argue that there existed different regional characteristics. In the north-eastern part small caves were used as burial grounds from the MN period, while in the FN phase inhumations and open-air cemeteries were preferred. In LN–FN Laconia there was a persistence of caves as burial and living areas and secondary burials remained significant. Certainly, the discovery of more cemeteries will enrich our understanding and will elucidate this regional hypothesis in the case of the Peloponnese. Furthermore, they will allow us to appreciate the Neolithic practices and developments which were followed during the EBA, such as the chamber tomb and the use of flaked tools, mainly obsidian, as burial offerings.

Thessaly and the Peloponnese have been the best documented regions regarding burial traditions in Neolithic Greece. Although there are significant differences in the geography, material culture, size and types of settlement, as well as settlement patterns, similar trends can be seen throughout the Mesolithic and Neolithic phases. As the corpus of burials increases for Neolithic Greece, this will allow us to obtain an insight into social conditions, attitudes and practices relating to death at a local level. Thus, we will be able to make valid interregional comparisons in order to comprehend better Neolithic beliefs for the afterlife.
