177 ... [William] Spycer of Nottingham [son and heir] of Hugh le Spycer. Plea: debt on demand. ... William agreed to lease and ... his messuage with all buildings, stalls and barns thereupon constructed ... with adjacent gardens together with 3 acres of land adjacent to Whiston (Whyston) ... Tues the feast of the invention of the HC [9] Henry IV [3 May 1408] of years following and fully completed, rendering annually to William ... at two terms 36s.8d. [at the feast of St M]artin [11 Nov] and 36s.8d. at the feast of the invention of the HC [3 May] under certain ... [condition that] he should maintain, sustain and in roofing and timber, he should repair sufficiently and competently the walls, doors, windows and closes with all other necessaries during that time so that William or his heirs should not be damaged for default of repairs. William bound himself to pay Thomas 40m in ... after the customs ... or any ... on the part of William would or should be broken as by the indenture of William and Thomas made on the covenant fully testifies. On the part of William the covenant was broken and not fulfilled for default of repairs of the timbers and roofing of the capital messuage, the buildings, stall and barns and the 3 acres next Whiston were taken outside Thomas' hands (extra manus dicti Thome) by John Botall, clerk, v[icar] of the hospital of St John without the walls of Nottingham against the form of the indentures and so the action of right (accio juris) accrued to Thomas to seek 40m which he should have paid at the feast of the assumption of the BVM last [15 Aug 1409]; he paid nothing. Damages: £20. He produces suit.

... The said William in his own person says that the pl ought not to hold his action v him. He says that well and truly it is that the def held as in the indenture recited above leased to Thomas at term under the form and condition as specified in the indenture. Protesting, he says that all default of not repairing the tenements in the said indenture is by the breaking and bad management of Thomas and his servants (per fraccionem and malam gubernacionem predicti Thome et serviencium suorum). For the plea, he says that William within the said tenement gave a tenement with its appurtenances as specified in the indenture to Henry his son and Agnes his wife to hold for their lives by virtue of the same. He says at the time of this attorney at Nottingham Thomas and William together were agreed in the parish where the tenements are 9 Henry IV by the mediation of Walter Wystethorp, that Thomas should repair the tenements from the rent specified in the indenture for all the time after the attorneying during the said term and that William should have the due allocated reparation from Henry and Agnes from the rent that Thomas was held to pay to Henry and Agnes, and that William is undone (exeveretur) forever from the reparation and all other agreements specified in the said indenture. He says that all such agreements in the borough of Nottingham according to the custom of the town used from time out of mind are ... of worth and effect when especially made at common law (et dicit quod omnia talia concordia in burgo de Not' predict' secundum consuetudinem civitat' ejusdem ville usitat' a tempore cujus contraria memoria hominum non existitur sunt ... valoris et efectus cum est speciale factum ad communem legem). He says that Henry died and Agnes' rent was in arrears to the value of 5m and more for the tenements specified in the said indenture. He says that Agnes was ready to allocate to Thomas for the reparation of the tenements reasonably made in the tenements after the said attorney so made to Agnes specified in the said indenture, and says that the tenements with their appurtenances as specified in the said indenture were well and sufficiently repaired before the said attorney (attornacionem) all of which William is ready to verify and he seeks judgement. As to the 3 acres of land from which Thomas has charged he was ejected by John Botall, clerk, because Thomas has not shown that John had right in the said lands, he seeks judgement if Thomas ought not to hold his action v him. To this Thomas comes and says that the said tenements specified in the said indenture are ruined and not repaired on account of the default of William before Thomas attorned Henry and Agnes (ruinosa fuerunt et non reparat' ob defectu dicti Willelmi antequam ipse Thomas prefatis Henrico et Agneti attornavit).
