Key points to self-publishing

This guide is aimed primarily at authors trying to publish their own work: in other words, acting as their own publisher.

Getting an ISBN

For various purposes, including computerised ordering systems and cataloguing, it is normal for all books commercially published to be given an International Standard Book Number (ISBN).

Each publisher is allocated a number, preceded by a product code of either 978 or 979, and by 0- or 1- indicating the English language countries. After the publisher's number comes that of the individual book, and the fourth and final section of the number is a check digit for computer purposes.

A University of Nottingham ISBN 978-0-85358-225-0 indicates:

978-	product code used for books
0-	an English language publisher
85358-	University of Nottingham
225-	identifier for specific title
0	check digit

You can obtain an ISBN before publication so that it can be printed on the verso (the back) of the title-page and quoted in advertising literature. Getting an ISBN and giving details of the book to Nielsen Bookdata has the great advantage of securing an entry in the weekly publication, The Bookseller, which promotes sales.

For departmental publications, the Standard Book Numbering Agency has allocated ISBNs to The University of Nottingham. Contact the Library Resource Acquisition team (based at King's Meadow Campus: 0115 95 14615, or bookacquisitions@nottingham.ac.uk) to request an ISBN if you intend to publish. Further information about registering details of and publicising the title will be supplied along with the ISBN.

If your publication is of general/widespread interest and might benefit from additional publicity contact the University's Marketing and Communications team at communications@nottingham.ac.uk

Non-departmental publications and publishers should visit <http://www.isbn.nielsenbook.co.uk/> for further information.

Getting an ISSN

A similar system exists for getting an International Standard Serial Number (ISSN). If you produce a periodical, visit <http://www.bl.uk/bibliographic/issn.html> for more information and fill in the form at <http://forms.bl.uk/bibliographic/>.

Copyright

Please see our pages on copyright <http://www.nottingham.ac.uk/library/help/copyright/> for further information.

Legal deposit

The Legal Deposit Libraries Act 2003 and the Irish Copyright Act 1963 entitles the British Library to one copy of every book or pamphlet published in the United Kingdom. If you are publishing yourself it is your responsibility to send this, without being asked. Send one copy to:

Legal Deposit Office
British Library
Boston Spa
Wetherby
West Yorkshire
LS23 7BY
Tel: 01937 546268
Email: legal-deposit-books@bl.uk
URL: <http://www.bl.uk/aboutus/legaldeposit/>

This ensures that the book is seen by the cataloguers of the British National Bibliography (BNB), which is a weekly list of British publications. If your book appears in this, it will be brought to the notice of libraries throughout the world, and this may well help to promote sales and awareness. It does make it very important, however, to ensure that the information on the title-page and verso does include your name and address as publisher, so that BNB can repeat this. If the sale price (including postage and packing if appropriate) is likely to remain constant until stock runs out, it should be prominently printed on the work so that BNB will include it.

In addition, five other libraries, known as Copyright Deposit Libraries, are entitled to a free copy on request, which is usually made a few months after publication. These libraries are: The Bodleian Library in Oxford, Cambridge University Library, the National Library of Scotland, the National Library of Wales, and Trinity College Library, Dublin.

Copies may be sent (without necessarily waiting for a demand) to:

The Agent
Agency for the Legal Deposit Libraries
161 Causewayside
Edinburgh
EH9 1PH
Tel: 0131 623 4680
Email: publisher.enquiries@legaldeposit.org.uk

Public lending right

If you think your publication is likely to be loaned from public libraries, you can apply for Public Lending Rights online at <https://www.plr.uk.com/registrationservice/apply.htm>.

The scheme applies only to books. The author must be named on the title-page, and lending from libraries which are not public is ignored. The Writers' and Artists' Yearbook is well worth consulting for further details of the scheme, as well as for other topics including those already mentioned.
