

University of Nottingham Research Information System Deposit Licence

Why is a deposit licence required?

The RIS repository supports the long-term preservation of research outputs, and free access to them. To undertake this role, the administrators of the RIS repository need permission of the copyright holder to store, copy and reformat the material to ensure that it can be preserved and made available in the future. This deposit licence is designed to give repository administrators the right to do this, and to confirm that the depositor has the right to submit the material to the repository. This deposit licence is not designed to determine terms of use of the content of an output that is accessed via the RIS repository.

1. The Depositor's Rights and Responsibilities

The Depositor hereby confirms that,

- They own copyright in the Research Output or are authorised by the owner(s), or other holder(s), of these rights and are competent to grant under this agreement a licence to hold and disseminate copies.
- They have secured sufficient permissions to ensure that the Research Output does not and shall not violate or infringe any intellectual property rights.
- They have made all necessary checks to ensure that jointly owned or third-party copyright material included in the Research Output is acknowledged.
- They have fulfilled all the obligations required by any agreement with an organisation that commissioned, sponsored or supported the Research Output, and the terms of the deposit enable adherence to the terms of any other agreement.
- They will notify when depositing any restriction on public access to the Research Output for the protection of patent applications or other intellectual property rights.

2. The Repository's Rights and Responsibilities

The Depositor grants University of Nottingham Research Information System (the Repository) a non-exclusive licence to use the Research Output in the following ways:

- Distribute copies of the Research Output worldwide, via any medium for the lifetime of the Repository or as negotiated with the depositor, under end user terms specified by the depositor.
- Electronically store, copy or reformat the Research Output, or do any other act restricted by copyright, to the extent necessary to ensure future preservation and accessibility.
- Remove the Research Output for academic or administrative reasons, or in accordance with the University of Nottingham Libraries Takedown Policy.

The University of Nottingham:

- Shall incur no liability for the work in the event of breach of intellectual property rights or any other right in the material deposited.
- Shall be under no obligation to take legal action on behalf of the Depositor or other rights holders in the event of breach of intellectual property rights or any other right in the material deposited.
