pallui men autodre muroz filic urusalt mi $ = F = E = F = E ula vio cit un trefamus dicullans labia ma nate dilato quia amose languo s tand dioa. md that but turqua ma o doe unquamos ma uniferi aunai me andid't rubiaidus moz Giy onna aromata iam cin pemp'tran pular about 4 recollect flores aparuceunt clar ex multis lana a fub capita mas 4 detara nac florance o doran actarát et nos turtuns ulus ampletabeur uc. p. lauda a la . a The to waste same of the contract andtta est in terra nostra cur mous tihe urusalem .p. laudate dum q. e propera a unca unca un m de liberto attue cit quelun 7 no muan ulli notam 7 " natian mala punna crittur crittur linam Decorated leaf from the Wollaton Antiphonal (MS 250 f.369).

The Wollaton Antiphonal

St Leonard's

The Wollaton Antiphonal is extraordinary for many reasons - not least because of its long association with a single owner, St Leonard's Church, Wollaton. It was purchased in 1460 by the executors of the late rector, William Husse, who wished to provide a gift for the church.

creation was a major achievement, involving the preparation of more than 207 skins to make 412 leaves measuring 575 x 366mm. Its decoration was equally ambitious. As well as 23 historiated initials, it contains many heraldic elements, honouring the ancestors of Chaworth and his wife Isabella Aylesbury. A charming detail is the addition of ink sketches of faces within many initial letters.

Thomas Chaworth of Wiverton, Nottinghamshire. Its physical

Typical features of the most beautiful leaves can be illustrated by this example (left). The feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary has a simple decorated border, including the Chaworth shield. The chant "Tota pulcra es" follows the initial, which contains an image of Mary, with golden rays surrounding her blue cloak, and four angels in the background. The rubrics 'p' and 'a' direct the singers as they follow the sequence of 'psalmus' and 'antiphon'. The image of three priests on a later leaf shows how such a choir book was used.

The Antiphonal inevitably suffered over the centuries, with damp and mould destroying whole sections and its decayed binding limiting any opening. Since 2001 its conservation has steadily progressed, generously supported by the National Manuscripts Conservation Trust, the Pilgrim Trust and others. The late Dr Nicholas Hadgraft had completed over half of the volume before his sudden death in 2004. His plans for its treatment are being pursued. Digital images of the manuscript are also being captured as the project enters its final stage.

The initial for Psalm 97 shows three priests with a noted book on a lectern (MS 250 f.241v).

The parchment is held in tension as conservation is undertaken at r Hadgraft's workshop, 2003.

The conservators Nicholas Hadgraft and Cheryl Porter discuss the proposed work with representatives from St. Leonard's Church (Geoffrey Howard, Canon David James, Malcolr Stacey and Anne Walters) 2001