Studying philosophy at Nottingham

We offer an unusually broad syllabus, spanning the Western and Asian traditions.

Exceptional facilities and resources

The main library for philosophy students is the Hallward Library, located on University Park Campus. All our philosophy modules use electronic reading lists which are directly linked to the library’s huge online collection of ebooks and ejournals. This means you can access most of your reading remotely and that key texts are always readily available to you. To find out about the wide range of facilities and resources on offer see nottingham.ac.uk/library/hallward

Innovative teaching

The department has an international reputation and attracts staff and students from around the world. Our staff convey their own love of their subjects, which include feminist and social philosophy, mind and perception, ethics and applied philosophy, Indian and Chinese philosophy, and the philosophies of law, science, sex and gender.

At a glance

- Study in a department ranked in the top 20 in the country by The Complete University Guide 2019
- Have the opportunity to study abroad and gain a new perspective on philosophy in countries around the globe
- Get hands-on experience teaching philosophy as a volunteer in primary schools through the Nottingham Advantage Award scheme

Beyond the curriculum

Alongside the Philosophy Society, we offer a range of activities to help broaden your skills, make you feel at home in the department or just have some fun! These include volunteering to teach philosophy in local primary schools, a peer mentoring scheme, and guest lectures.

BA Philosophy

On this course we teach important skills in clear thinking, argument and communication and knowledge of the main areas of philosophical thought.

You will take a combination of compulsory and optional modules from the Department of Philosophy, as well as a choice of modules from other complementary subjects in years one and two. You also have the opportunity to study abroad for one or two semesters of the course.

Year one
Year one introduces you to the subject through a series of core modules in central philosophical problems. You will also be able to choose optional modules allowing you to customise your degree to your interests.

Year two
There are no compulsory modules in year two - you get a totally free choice. You can build on material studied in year one, and develop and broaden your philosophical skills and knowledge into new traditions and disciplines.

Year three
There will be free choice from a wide variety of more advanced modules, including the opportunity to write a dissertation on a topic of your own choosing.

I decided that I wanted to study philosophy after developing an interest in the kinds of questions that concern philosophers throughout my time at school. I love studying at Nottingham, the department is amazingly supportive, the course is varied and extremely interesting, and the campus provides a beautiful place to study. I hope that you will love it as much as I do!

Boo Jackson, BA Philosophy

nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/philosophy
BA Philosophy and Theology

This course offers a comprehensive exploration of the world’s major spiritual and philosophical traditions, Western and Asian.

You will gain a good grounding in the sources and contemporary context for theological reflection by studying the biblical writings together with key thinkers, ideas, events and movements that shaped the course of Western Christian thought. You will also have the opportunity to study the main philosophical traditions - including the analytic, continental, Indian, and Chinese, while acquiring important skills in clear thinking, argument and communication.

Year one
In philosophy, you will be introduced to the subject through a series of core modules covering central philosophical problems. You will also be able to choose optional modules. In theology, you will gain a broad foundation in key theological sub-disciplines, studying a range of modules which concern critical study of the Bible, the historical development of Christian thought, modern Christian ideas, Islam and Judaism.

Year two
In philosophy, you will choose from a variety of optional modules, which will build on material studied in year one, allowing you to develop and broaden your philosophical skills and knowledge. Modules typically cover Asian philosophy, ethics, freedom, meaning, social issues, the mind, the nature of reality, and understanding science. In theology, you will take a core module in The Philosophy of Religion: Atheism, Theism, and Nihilism. In addition, you may choose to study areas such as Church history, literature and religion, Islam, Jesus, Judaism, Paul, the Old Testament, and science and theology.

Year three
Year three philosophy modules reflect the research expertise of our department, including in criminal law, ethics, logic, metaphysics and philosophy of science. You may also opt to write a dissertation on a subject of your choice.

In theology, there are a wide range of options, and you may concentrate on philosophical approaches to religion, as well as taking options in biblical studies, religion and culture, religious studies, and theological ideas.

For more information on the theology element of your course see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/theology

BA Classical Civilisation and Philosophy

This course offers a diverse and flexible approach to philosophy, and to the literature, history, and culture of Ancient Greece and Rome. To further your understanding, you will have the option to take Greek or Latin from beginners’ level, giving you the opportunity to engage with key classical texts in their original form.

You will be able to put your learning into practical use through schemes such as our voluntary opportunities in local schools. You will also have access to our outstanding Manuscripts and Special Collections Archive, which houses a rare collection of primary sources to enhance your understanding.

Year one
In year one, you will take a combination of compulsory and optional modules from philosophy and classics. Philosophy modules introduce you to philosophical study at university level, and guide you through principles of good reasoning, argumentation, and writing. In classics, you will study two core survey modules which give an integrated introduction to the history and culture of Greece and Rome and their reception. A choice of three further modules go into more depth on methods and approaches appropriate to historical, literary and artistic sources, and each builds up skills in different types of assessment. You are also encouraged to study either ancient Greek or Latin.

Year two
Classical civilisation combines a wide range of optional modules exploring ancient literature, art and history, including extended study of a particular ancient source if you are planning third-year dissertation work. In philosophy, you will choose from a variety of optional modules, which will build on material studied in year one, allowing you to develop and broaden your philosophical skills and knowledge.

Year three
In year three, philosophy modules reflect the research expertise of our department, including in metaphysics, ethics, logic, philosophy of science, and criminal law. You may also opt to write a dissertation on a subject of your choosing. In classical civilisation, you'll either develop and pursue your own interests through a dissertation or take the Special Subject module which involves a detailed study of a particular topic.

For more information on the classical civilisation element of your course see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/classicsandarchaeology

For typical philosophy modules, see page 7.

The department is a great learning atmosphere full of friendly professionals. The eclectic research of the tutors can bring you into contact with literature, history, archaeology, art history and continental philosophy – something for all students of the programme.

Jack Murphy, BA Philosophy and Theology

nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/theology
BA English and Philosophy

This course combines a rigorous training in analytic philosophy with the opportunity to study English language, literature and drama from Old English to the present day. You will develop important skills in clear thinking, argument, the use of language and independent study.

Year one
In English, you have a choice of three core modules from the areas of drama and performance; English language and applied linguistics; literature, 1500 to the present; and medieval languages and literatures. In philosophy, you will be introduced to the subject through a series of core modules in central philosophical problems and you will also be able to choose from optional modules such as those listed in the table on page 9.

Year two
In English, you will choose core modules to develop your studies in at least two areas of the discipline. This will develop your ability to explore the interaction between historical “epochs” and the drama, language or literature you’re studying.

In philosophy, you will choose from a variety of optional modules, which will build on material studied in year one, allowing you to develop and broaden your philosophical skills and knowledge.

Year three
In English, you’ll choose from a range of modules enabling you to specialise in key areas. Philosophy modules in year three reflect the research expertise of our department, including in metaphysics, ethics, logic, philosophy of science, and criminal law. You may also opt to write a dissertation on a subject of your choosing in either department.

The School of English at a glance:
- Nottingham’s School of English is the 6th best university school for creative writing and 7th best for English in the UK according to the The Complete University Guide 2019
- You can undertake bespoke work placements in creative industries, marketing, publishing, archives or healthcare communication
- Many students get involved in writing and editorial work for the award-winning student magazine Impact or publish work for Words on Words, the English school blog

BSc Psychology and Philosophy

This course provides you with a well-rounded education in the principles of philosophy and psychology. The teaching programme provides a solid understanding of philosophical and psychological theories, as well as the knowledge, analytical tools and skills needed to assess and conduct empirical research.

Year one
You will be introduced to philosophical study at university level, and guided through principles of good reasoning, argumentation, and writing. In psychology, you will be introduced to core areas via modules covering biological, cognitive, developmental and social psychology. As well as lectures and tutorials in these core areas, you will also have lectures in statistical methods, and practical classes, in which you will learn to plan, conduct, and write reports on psychology experiments.

Year two
During year two, you’ll choose from a variety of optional modules, building on material studied in year one. In philosophy, modules typically cover social issues, the mind, ethics, freedom, Asian philosophy, the nature of reality, meaning, and understanding science. In psychology, you will study modules that tackle topics in greater depth and deal with more advanced theoretical problems. In practical classes you will refine your skills in planning, implementing, and reporting psychological research.

Year three
In year three, philosophy modules reflect the research expertise of our staff, including in metaphysics, ethics, logic, philosophy of science, and criminal law. You may also opt to write a dissertation on a subject of your choosing. In psychology, lectures, tutorials, and practical classes teach you to plan, conduct and report psychology experiments. You will undertake group projects and a long research project, with supervision from a staff member. You will also choose further credits from a range of specialist modules in both applied and theoretical topics.

For more information on the psychology element of your course see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/psychology

Studying philosophy here is great. There’s so much freedom to choose particular areas that you are interested in to study in depth. The lecturers are extremely approachable and break even the most difficult concepts down with ease. The workload isn’t terrifying either.

BA Economics and Philosophy

Combining two distinct disciplines, this joint honours course develops your understanding of how societies work and equips you with a unique blend of knowledge.

Year one
In economics, you will typically study macro and microeconomics, as well as a study skills module to ensure that your transition from school or college to university is smooth. In philosophy, you will be introduced to central philosophical problems through the core modules Mind, Knowledge, and Ethics; and Reasoning, Argument, and Logic. You will also be able to choose optional modules allowing you to customise your degree to your interests.

Year two
In economics, you will build on your first-year experience with modules on economic theory, as well as choosing optional modules. In philosophy, you will choose from a variety of optional modules, which will build on material studied in year one, allowing you to develop and broaden your philosophical skills and knowledge.

Year three
In your final year you will select modules from a variety of specialist subjects offered by the two departments - 60 credits from economics and 60 credits from philosophy, with the possibility of a dissertation in philosophy.

For more information on the economics element of your course see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/economics

BA Music and Philosophy

This course provides the opportunity to study the theory and practice of music, and offers a diverse and flexible approach to studying philosophy. It is equally weighted between the two subjects.

Year one
In year one, you will take a combination of compulsory and optional modules in music and philosophy. In music, your understanding of the discipline is consolidated and deepened through the study of music theory, history, repertoire, world music and popular music. Philosophy modules introduce you to philosophical study at university level, and guide you through principles of good reasoning, argumentation and writing. The remaining credits may be filled with optional music modules in composition, performance and music technology, optional philosophy modules, or modules from another department.

Year two
In economics, you will build on your first-year experience with modules on economic theory, as well as choosing optional modules. In philosophy, you will choose from a variety of optional modules, which will build on material studied in year one, allowing you to develop and broaden your philosophical skills and knowledge.

Year three
The final year allows you to specialise further with music pathways including a dissertation (on a subject of your choice), musicology, performance, composition and music technology. Philosophy modules reflect the research expertise of our department, including in metaphysics, ethics, logic, philosophy of science and criminal law. You may choose to write a dissertation in either music or philosophy on a topic of your choice and there is also the opportunity to take 20 credits of modules from another department.

For typical philosophy modules, see page 7.

The Department of Music at a glance:

- We were awarded 10th place by The Complete University Guide 2019 for music in the UK
- You’ll have the opportunity to join over 20 student ensembles and use our superb performance facilities
- You can get university credit for work placements with orchestras, recording studios, music publishers, gig promoters and other educational institutions

For more information on the music element of your course see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/music

I chose Nottingham because it really stood out for me in terms of the quality of teaching and variety of what you can study. All of the lecturers I’ve had so far have been experts in their respective fields and very talented academics too.

Matt Simpson, BSc Economics
BA Philosophy, Politics and Economics

Our courses

Taught by the School of Economics, the School of Politics and International Relations, and the Department of Philosophy, this course offers a holistic approach to understanding the world around us.

Applying the complementary analytical frameworks of philosophy, political science and economics, you will gain a rich understanding of the roots of, and solutions to, real-world problems.

You will spend a third of your time studying modules in each discipline.

Year one

You will take modules across each discipline. Modules in mathematics and statistics form part of the first year allowing you to take a wide selection of economics modules in your final year.

In year one you also take a year-long study skills module to ensure that the transition from school to university is a smooth and efficient one. You will also take a year-long module that focuses on career skills and employability, including guidance on preparing your CV, interview techniques and applying for internships.

Year two

You will take modules across each discipline with more choice of optional modules. You can also apply to spend a semester of your second year studying abroad, taking similar modules to your counterparts back in Nottingham or expanding your knowledge through other options.

Year three

You can take either 40 credits’ worth of politics, philosophy and economics modules, or 60 credits of modules from any two of these disciplines.

BA Religion Philosophy and Ethics

Our courses

The political and social importance of religion in today’s society cannot be overestimated. Meanwhile, the world faces profound questions of human identity and ethics, which philosophy and theology tackle in many different ways.

Our joint honours degree in religion, philosophy and ethics draws on the combined expertise of both of Department of Philosophy and Department of Theology and Religious Studies to offer one of the broadest humanities courses which is of the utmost relevance to the contemporary world.

Year one

Core modules in year one will introduce you to a wide range of issues in philosophy, religion and ethics from a variety of philosophical and theological perspectives. Through your selection of optional modules, you may choose to focus either on philosophy or theology and religious studies, or combine the two.

Year two

You will take four core modules, as well as options chosen from those on offer in the Department of Philosophy, and the Department of Theology and Religious Studies. This allows you to develop your interests in areas studied in year one or to study something new.

Year three

In year three, you will have the flexibility to focus on either philosophy or theology and religious studies, with a wide range of modules on offer in both departments. Alternatively, you may choose to give equal weighting to both. You will also have the option of writing a dissertation, which will allow you to develop your interest in a particular subject through independent research.

BSc Physics and Philosophy

This course allows you to study both physics and philosophy to degree level and emphasises the interplay between these closely related subjects. Throughout the course you will have the opportunity to address some of the deeper philosophical questions that modern physics raises, such as the implications of the probabilistic interpretations of quantum mechanics. The degree offers a broad range of core physics modules, coupled with a mix of general and specific philosophy modules.

Year one
You will take a selected sub-sample of the core physics modules that connect to philosophy and a complementary selection of philosophy modules. You will also be taught the general mathematics that you will need to take physics to a higher level.

Year two
You will study more advanced areas in current physics (such as astrophysics), and choose from a selection of philosophy modules.

Year three
In the first semester, you will finish the core syllabus of physics, and in the second semester, you will choose from a wide range of options in advanced physics and related subjects such as astrophysics. On the philosophy side of the course, you will have a wide range of choices from among the more advanced options offered by the University. You will also complete a dissertation-style project.

For typical philosophy modules, see page 7.

BA French and Philosophy

On this course you will combine studies in French language, literature and culture with a wide range of philosophical topics. This is a four-year course with the third year spent abroad.

On both routes – post-A level or beginners’ – you will normally divide your time equally between French and philosophy.

Year one
If you are taking French post-A level you will receive a firm grounding in the structures of the language through a core language module. You will also take the core Introduction to French and Francophone Studies module introducing you to key areas of interest in the field of French studies.

If you are starting French at beginners’ level, you will pursue a structured course in the language to take you from beginners’ to advanced level. You will also take core modules taught in English that introduce you to key areas of interest in the field of French studies.

In philosophy, modules introduce you to philosophical study at university level, and guide you through principles of good reasoning, argumentation, and writing.

The School of Physics and Astronomy at a glance:
- We were ranked third in the UK for research according in the most recent Research Excellence Framework (2014)
- You will be joining an internationally-renowned, Nobel Prize winning centre for teaching
- Graduating students rated the school at 96% for ‘overall satisfaction’ with their physics course

Engaging study, incredible results

In the Department of Philosophy, we are passionate about innovative and inspiring teaching. We combine traditional and new methods of teaching and learning to stimulate your passion for philosophy.

Your week
Your typical working week is shaped by the modules you choose and how you decide to organise your time. In year one, you’ll have about 10 to 12 hours in lectures and seminars. For the rest of the time, you’ll be engaged in reading, preparation, and self-directed study which is an important skill we can help you develop.

Teaching and learning
Our courses are delivered through lectures, seminars, tutorials and one-to-one supervision for your dissertation. The aim is to stimulate your curiosity and provide you with essential information by means of lectures in the first instance, so as to establish a solid grounding in the core of the subject. In addition, all lecturers have two drop-in sessions per week when you can talk privately with them about your work.

How will I be assessed?
Our assessment methods are designed to develop different skills and strengths. These could include essays, in-class tests, group and one-to-one sessions, poster presentations and final exams. We also provide you with timely and constructive feedback to allow you to improve your work.

Visit nottingham.ac.uk/philosophy to watch some of our tutors describe the modules they teach in 60 seconds in our Module in a Minute series.

I was headhunted for a role as a recruitment consultant shortly after graduating and have since trained to be a barrister. I received a full scholarship to study for the Bar and know that this was partly due to the debating and mooting I got involved with at university. Philosophy definitely helped my written and oral advocacy – I am able to argue my point very successfully in mock trials!

How to apply

All applications for undergraduate study at Nottingham, including applications by international students, must be made through UCAS.

You can apply online at ucas.com and will be notified of decisions through UCAS Track.

Your personal statement
This is the section of your UCAS form that tells us most about you, and you should make the best use of it. Be as specific and detailed as you can – we would like to see that you are a student who can work hard, be self-motivated and make the best possible use of the opportunities that our courses offer you. We would also like to hear about any skills you have gained through extracurricular activities.

Minimum entry requirements
Unless otherwise stated in individual course profiles, all UK applicants should have GCSE English grade 4 (C) as a minimum.

Alternative qualifications
In this brochure you will find our A level and International Baccalaureate entry requirements but we accept a much broader range of qualifications. For more details, visit nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/applying

Flexible admissions policy
In recognition of our applicants' varied experience and educational pathways, we employ a flexible admissions policy. If we judge that your situation has adversely affected your achievement, then we will consider this when assessing your academic potential. Some courses may make a slightly lower offer. For more information about this policy, see nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/applying

Mature applicants
We encourage applications from mature applicants who have a significant gap in education. You should apply through UCAS. Find out more at nottingham.ac.uk/mature

International applicants
The University provides a range of information and advice for international applicants. If you are unable to attend an open day, we can meet you in your country at one of our overseas events or arrange an individual visit to the University. For further information please visit nottingham.ac.uk/go/international-applicants

Deferred entry
Applicants who wish to defer their entry by a year will not be at a disadvantage. Please tell us something about your plans for your gap year in your UCAS personal statement.

Equal opportunities policy
The University aims to create the conditions whereby students and staff are treated solely on the basis of their merits, abilities and potential, regardless of gender, race, colour, nationality, ethnic or national origin, age, socio-economic background, disability, religious or political beliefs, trade union membership, family circumstances, sexual orientation or other irrelevant distinction.

nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy/applying around one-third of our UK students receive our means-tested core bursary, worth up to £2,000 a year (2018 entry figure; subject to change). For details, see nottingham.ac.uk/financialsupport

This brochure has been drafted in advance of the academic year to which it applies. Every effort has been made to ensure that the information contained in this brochure is accurate at the time of publishing, but changes (for example to course content) are likely to occur given the interval between publication and commencement of the course. It is therefore very important to check our website for any updates before you apply for the course by following nottingham.ac.uk/ugstudy. Where there is a difference between the contents of this brochure and our website, the contents of the website take precedence.
